Loans to Prevent Price Crash Likely

Supply 50 Pct. Above Year's Consumption Due This Summer.

By William V. Nessly.

A sharp slash in acreage to be planted to wheat must be called for this year by the AAA, it appeared almost certain yesterday, on the heels of widespread resentment among corn, cotton and tobacco growers against their acreage allotments.

Officials charged with administering the crop-control law, awaiting tomorrow's official estimate on this year's wheat yield, contemplated the likelihood of a crop far in excess of normal needs of the country, both for domestic consumption and export, and prepared for the necessity not only of cutting acreage for the 1939 crop, but making loans on this year's crop as well in order to prevent a crash in prices.

960,000,000 Bushels Expected.

Facing a crop from approximately 80,000,000 acres known to have been planted to winter and spring wheat, officials conceded a normal average yield of 12 bushels an acre would bring a total of 960,000,000 bushels, compared with a normal national consumption of 750,000,000 bushels.

With a carry-over of about 200,000,000 bushels from last year's crop, expected to be on hand July 1, the country faced the prospect this summer of having approximately 1,150,000,000 bushels, more than 50 per cent above the normal consumption annually.

George E. Farrell, director of the Western division of the AAA, last night declined to commit himself definitely on a crop total for this year, pointing out that many factors could operate between early May and harvest time to affect the crop greatly. He cited the fact that wheat prices rose Saturday on reports of frost in some sections, but he did mention the prospect of a supply of $1,150,000,000 bushels of wheat when the 1938 crop has been harvested.

Needs Discussed.

With the new farm act providing for announcement of the 1939 wheat program by July 15, AAA officials yesterday were discussing the apparent need for cutting planting to perhaps as low as 50,000,000 acres to prevent another addition to the price-depressing surplus and to use part of the heavy carry-over now in prospect.

Wheat allotments for this year's crop totaled 62,500,000 acres, a figure exceeded by almost 17,500,000. However, due to the fact that the new farm bill was signed only in February, confusion over the size of the crop was anticipated.

Folk Festival Closes; 15,000 At 3-Day Fete

500 Performers From All Over U. S. Take Part in Songs, Dances.

With the blare of bagpipes, the tinkle of dulcimers, and the screech of fiddles still resounding through the air, the fifth annual National Folk Festival last night became folk history.

Fittingly enough, the last number of the big program—in which more than 500 persons from throughout the Nation participated—was the highland fling, which the ancient Scots used as a victory dance and the young Scots of America dance every chance they get.

Approximately 15,000 Washingtonians, including more than 3,000 public school children, saw the six shows that made up the festival and presented the pageant of America in the songs, dances and rhythms native to the numerous folk groups of the country.

Program Diverse.

The show held many surprises for those who might have been considering all Americans alike, and furnished rich proof of the claim that the folk arts are the real arts.

Sea chanteys, blues songs, spirituals, running sets, Pennsylvania German folklore, Slavonic dances, fiddle tunes from eight States, lumberjack ballads, Irish and Scotch tunes and dances, ballads, Spanish and Mexican folk songs, Norwegian tunes, Paul Bunyan legends, and Indian dances—all were on the Sunday programs.

W. C. Handy sang his "St. Louis Blues" and played snatches from his "Memphis Blues" on the cornet. The blues rhythm, he declared, he picked up from the Negroes of the deep South during his days as a water boy and later as a laborer on the levees.

The rapidity with which the Negro folk songs are growing and the capacity of the colored race to make up words and tunes to suit any occasion were represented in

Ruthless Attacks Off Spain Incense British Seamen

London, May 8 (AP).—Four hundred British merchant seamen today protested to the foreign office against "ruthless and absolutely deliberate" attacks on British shipping in Spanish waters and demanded the government "take immediate action" for protection.

A telegraphic protest was sent from Valencia by the masters of numerous British ships in Spanish ports. They asked neutral zones be established in Spanish harbors for the loading and unloading of neutral vessels.

Belated Baby Born at Zoo on Mother's Day

Hannah, Killer of 3 Others, Nurses Latest Infant as Keepers 'Shsh.'

Hannah, 10-year-old pigmy hippopotamus, yesterday delivered a Mother's Day present to Zoo Director William M. Mann.

Her present was a baby pigmy hippo, born shortly after 4 a. m. with Zoo Policeman G. D. McLeod in attendance.

It was a surprise to the three keepers of the Elephant House, despite the fact that they have been expecting to see the baby pigmy for nearly two months.

Three Others Killed.

It was an even bigger surprise that Hannah permitted the baby to live through the day. Since she came to the Zoo in 1929, Hannah has won a pretty bad reputation as a mother by killing three other babies, each of them a few minutes after birth. She crushed two in her mouth and trampled the third.

This time she turned to her duties of motherhood like a veteran. She remained quiet most of the day, nursing the baby at intervals, and when she moved she moved carefully.

This change of heart was analyzed by Keeper Ralph Norris, as the result of her new quarters. He said:

"Since Hannah was moved out of the lion house she's been a changed animal."

Dr. Mann rushed to Hannah's cage as soon as he heard the news. He ordered special precautions to keep the mother from getting nervous.

Father Merely Grunts.

So great was held the danger of exciting the mother that no one, including Dr. Mann, would go near enough to the cage to determine the sex of the baby.

Dr. Mann said the mother and baby would be watched constantly for the next two or three weeks and, if Hannah becomes excited and endangers the baby, the guard has been instructed to take it from her cage.

Almost unnoticed in the excitement was Bill, the father, two cages away. The only indication he gave that he knew what was going on was a few grunts. Bill, two years older than Hannah, came to the Zoo in 1927, the gift of President Coolidge, who had received him from the late Harvey Firestone. Dr. Mann bought Hannah in 1929.

Yale Journal Hints Doctors Restrain Trade

Suggests Physicians Ousted by Medical Body May Sue in Courts.

Doctors expelled from the District Medical Society because of membership in the Group Health Association have recourse to the courts on the ground that the ouster is in restraint of trade, the Yale Law Journal will contend in its issue to be published tomorrow.

Expelled physicians must first exhaust remedies within the ranks of organized medicine itself by appealing to the judicial council of the American Medical Association, the Journal will declare. It will recommend that doctors "attempt redress in the courts" should their first appeal fail.

"Skillful indeed has been the technique of organized medicine's attack," states the article. "Under cover of a barrage of propaganda within the ranks of the profession, local medical societies throughout the country have frequently expelled, suspended or censured doctors who have engaged in any of the various forms of contract practice deemed 'unethical' by the majority."

Fee Schedule Endangered.

The article contends that an expelled doctor might build a good case for reinstatement on the ground that the District Medical Society by-law prohibiting members from engaging in group practice is in restraint of trade and therefore contrary to public policy.

The article suggests that "the doctor urge that expulsion was part of a scheme by which the society hoped to destroy Group Health Association and thereby remove the threat which its continued existence constitutes to the schedule of fees charged by the individual practitioner in the District."

Expressing some doubt as to whether the courts will concur in

'Fishing' Minister Vindicated Except For 1 Board Vote

Springfield, Vt., May 8 (U.P.).—The Rev. Lawrence Larrowe, who last Sunday absented himself from his first Methodist Church pulpit to fish for trout, was vindicated by the church trustees tonight.

His "Christian" Sunday was approved by a board vote of 37 to 1 and unanimously approved by vociferous cheering and hand-clapping of his 350 parishioners who packed the old stone edifice.

And the board assured each of his parishioners of a "Christian" Sunday for the remainder of the warm months. By the same vote, 37 to 1, they approved a motion of the educational board to have Sunday services from 9 to 10 a. m. so each could observe his sabbath as he would.

Brother of Otto Hunted in Theft

Vienna, May 8 (AP).—Authorities issued a warrant today for the arrest of 20-year-old Archduke Felix, of Hapsburg, younger brother of Archduke Otto, pretender to the non-existent Austrian throne. Felix was accused of stealing $900 worth of silverware and linen from the military academy at Wiener Neustadt from which he fled as a cadet March 11.

Felix was believed to be staying with his mother, former Empress Zita, and Otto in Belgium.

Needy Poet Kills 2 Daughters And Wife, Then Fails in Suicide

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., May 8.—Paul F. Bunge, 52, suspected of killing his wife and two young daughters, was arrested today after he had wounded himself with a pocket knife. Detective Chief W. D. Bush said Bunge made a detailed confession.

Bunge was picked up here early today by two policemen in a scout car, who did not suspect his identity at first. They became suspicious because he held a newspaper over his face as they approached.

Then, Bush related, the man cried, "I know you want me, but you will never take me alive," drew a knife from his pocket and slashed his throat.

The wound was superficial. While at the hospital, officers confronted Bunge with his son—Werner W. Bunge, 20, a sailor—who came here with funds contributed by shipmates on the destroyer Mugford, stationed at Boston.

In a detailed confession, Bush quoted Bunge as saying:

"I have no alibis. I am ready to pay whatever penalty the State exacts."

The bodies of Mrs. Bunge and her two children were found in their apartment last Monday after Ingeborg Bunge, an elder daughter, telephoned the police from Pittsburgh, saying she had received a letter indicating her parents had entered into a suicide pact over their destitute circumstances.

Mrs. Bunge's throat had been cut and the body placed in a bathtub.

Selassie Foils League Move To Back Italy

Britain Abandons Plan to Ask Recognition of Duce's Empire.

Negus Will Make Fight to Regain Throne at Session Today.

By the United Press.

Geneva, May 8.—Great Britain tonight abandoned her move to seek a resolution from the League of Nations Council which would open the way for general recognition of Italy's North African conquest and, in effect, vote Ethiopia out of legal existence.

Britain's retreat from her plan came a few hours after the arrival here of the British foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, for the Council meeting at 5 p. m. tomorrow.

A last-ditch battle by Haile Selassie, deposed Negus of Ethiopia, to regain his throne in a direct challenge to British diplomacy and sharp opposition from China, Soviet Russia and several Latin-American nations doomed the proposal.

A unanimous vote in the Council would be necessary for a resolution releasing League states from their 1936 pledges not to recognize Italy's Ethiopian conquest.

Unanimous Vote Needed.

As a result, Britain will be satisfied with a statement by the president of the Council at the end of the week-long session summarizing the viewpoints of those nations favoring recognition.

Armed with this statement, the British government—and perhaps France—will proceed to recognize Italian sovereignty in North Africa and thus fulfill London's principal pledge on the new Anglo-Italian treaty of friendship.

Until such British recognition is forthcoming the pact will not go into effect and Premier Mussolini will make no move toward withdrawing his troops from Spain.

Selassie Represented.

Selassie, who announced from his exile in England he was sending representatives to Geneva tomorrow and would demand to be heard, will be allowed to sit in the council deliberations without opposition, now that there will be no resolution on which he certainly would cast a negative vote.

A bitter tussle had been anticipated if the British delegates attempted to keep Selassie's representatives away from the council table on a question of procedure.

It was revealed simultaneously several prominent Britons, led by Sir Norman Angell, economist, will aid Selassie as technical advisers in his fight before the League Council. The others will be Prof. J. L. Bierly and H. S. Stanley Jevons.

The British secretary, Viscount Halifax, will make his first appearance before the council.

Ickes Is Omitted At Envoy's Dinner To Honor Eckener

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes, who is holding up sale of helium to Germany, has been omitted from the list of guests invited to a German Embassy dinner tonight honoring Dr. Hugo Eckener, German dirigible expert.

Eckener will try to convince Washington officials that the United States should sell helium for a new zeppelin, successor to the Hindenberg. Ickes has insisted on a guarantee that the helium would not be used "as an instrument of war."

Ambassador Dieckhoff's invitation list includes Summer Welles, Undersecretary of State; R. Walton Moore, special counsellor of the Department of State; Joseph Green, chairman of the National Munitions Control Board; Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and a group of Senators, most of whom are connected indirectly with granting permits for sale of helium.

Chinese Capture Ancient Castle Near Soochow.

By Jack Belden.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Yunho, Shantung-Kiangsu Border, May 6 (Delayed).—Chinese infantrymen today captured a strong Japanese position in a bloody battle within the walled city of Chieh-chuang east of Soochow.

This correspondent accompanied Gen. Fan Sung-fu, Chinese commander of this sector, and witnessed the final assault on Chieh-chung Castle—a centuries-old military citadel in the heart of the city.

Chinese artillery had been blasting away all night and made several breaches in the castle walls through which infantrymen charged at dawn with bayonets, swords and spears, after wading across a moat.

The Japanese were killed to the last man in hand-to-hand fighting which continued several hours. Some were burned alive when the Chinese set fire to houses in which they were barricaded.

The Japanese units in Chiehchuang had been surrounded for several days, and most of their ammunition was exhausted.

There were a dozen of these Japanese "enclaves" in this region at the beginning of this week, but now only one is left. When it is taken Gen. Fan will be able to reform his forces for an attack on Tancheng.

When the Japanese attacked a fortnight ago in this area they spread out in their usual fan-line formations and their vanguard units occupied all the important towns and villages north of the Lunghai Railway and east of the Grand Canal.

They made little or no effort to maintain lines of communication with their base at Lin-yi, to the northward, and consequently all were cut off and surrounded when the Chinese counterattacked.

A number of mobile artillery batteries has been moved up, and roads destroyed by the Chinese to block mechanized Japanese forces have been rebuilt.

Foreign officers (presumably German advisers of the Chinese army) are insisting that all the surrounded Japanese units be mopped up before the attack on Tancheng is launched. In line with this policy Gen. Fan will attack the last of the trapped Japanese units—in the center of the line above Pihsien—tomorrow.

Roosevelt Asks Joint Effort to Better World

Hull Cites Trade Policy in Speech Broadcast to South America.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt looked over the troubled international scene and called yesterday for "a joint effort in constructing a new and better world order."

A message from the President, returning to the Capital from a vacation at sea, was read by Secretary of State Hull in an international broadcast over the Columbia system on "economic co-operation in the Americas."

Apparently referring to his Administration's program of reciprocal tariff reductions, Mr. Roosevelt declared:

"The Government of the United States is pledged to a course of international economic co-operation and will spare no effort in loyally continuing on that course."

Pan-American Parleys Cited.

He added:

"Co-operation in the solution of economic problems offers one of the practical approaches to the task which the world must undertake.

"There is a general and growing realization that no nation or group of nations can enjoy prosperity and plenty when a large part of the world is in economic distress."

The nations of the Western Hemisphere, the President commented, are prepared to accept and act upon these conclusions, as is evidenced by the resolutions of recent inter-American conferences.

"A start already has been made," he exclaimed. "Such action is an integral part of and is in entire harmony with our inter-American

Rome Reveals Axis Pact to 'Split' Europe

'Spheres of Influence' in Smaller Nations Agreed to by Dictators.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 8.—A bargain to divide central Europe and the Balkans into Italian and German spheres of influence appeared tonight to be the major outcome of Adolf Hitler's $30,000,000 visit to Italy.

This was indicated strongly by high Fascist quarters as Hitler spent his final day here watching the Italian air force in maneuvers.

King Vittorio Emanuele and Premier Mussolini accompanied their guest to the Tyrrhenian coast, where two 23,000-ton condemned merchantmen were sunk off Fiumbara and tons of bombs were dropped in a mock battle in which 400 airplanes took part.

A few miles away, at Santa Marinella, a valley was torn to pieces in a demonstration of various forms of shelling. The warplane maneuvers rounded out the exhibition of Italy's armed might for Hitler.

Tomorrow morning Hitler will leave for Florence, and after ten hours there—to be devoted chiefly to seeing the city's art treasures—he will entrain for Germany.

High Fascist quarters made it clear Italy's Easter agreement with Great Britain did not weaken the Italo-German working agreement.

Last night, at the state dinner given to Hitler, Mussolini pledged fidelity to the Rome-Berlin friendship, and Hitler guaranteed "for all time" the Alpine border between the two countries.

Hitler was said to have a free

Hopkins Denies Relief Waste In Reply to Hoover on Fascism

By the United Press.

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins last night stoutly defended Government relief spending against criticism of waste, and attacked charges made by former President Herbert Hoover that New Deal policies were leading the Nation toward fascism.

In a radio speech over a Columbia Nation-wide hookup, Hopkins again assured WPA workers they need not contribute any political campaign funds and that they might vote for any candidate in any election without losing their jobs. He renewed his pledge that political coercion of WPA workers would not be tolerated and invited anyone having evidence of such coercion to submit it to him.

Hopkins called for an end to direct relief and criticized Hoover for advocating return of relief administration to the States. He said that Hoover, on his recent trip abroad, "seems to have missed entirely the basic fact that fascism came to those countries because the masses were not getting their fair share of things, and were willing to submit to anything in the way of a change."

"I wonder if his stubborn refusal to recognize realities, when the house was crumbling about his head, strengthened the people's faith in democracy?" he said. "I wonder if the tear gas with which he greeted the bonus army was his idea of the full flavor of democracy. I say it is policies like these which strike at the existence of our form of government.

Lifting of Ban On Arms for Spain Studied By Roosevelt

President Hints He Will Discuss Repeal With Hull Today.

Tanned Executive To Press Program

He Finds Congressional Prospects for His Plans Brighter.

By the United Press.

Aboard Presidential Special en Route to Washington, May 8.—Deeply tanned by a week of tropical sun, President Roosevelt tonight sped toward Washington from Charleston, S. C., after indicating at a press conference that he would discuss the Spanish arms embargo with Secretary of State Cordell Hull tomorrow.

The Chief Executive left the gray-hulled cruiser Philadelphia at 6:15 p. m., E. S. T., terminating a Caribbean fishing cruise that began eight days ago.

At a press conference in the admiral's quarters aboard the Philadelphia, the President was asked whether he was supporting the Nye resolution, objective of which is to raise the arms embargo against Spain. For reply he referred to the statement of impartiality issued last week by Secretary of State Cordell C. Hull.

Congress Leaders First.

However, it was regarded as indicative of an exploration of the subject that Mr. Roosevelt casually remarked he would confer with Hull tomorrow morning although he insisted that it merely was for the purpose of being brought up to date on State Department affairs.

[A recent report that the President and Secretary Hull would favor the Nye resolution to lift the embargo on arms to Spain was followed by expressions of doubt from many informed circles, including Chairman McReynolds of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

[State Department officials indicated there had been no developments to justify a change in the department's policy of strict neutrality. There has been, however, intensified pressure on the department, from many organizations and groups, to lift the embargo in order that the loyalists might get American arms.—Editor's note.]

The President will arrive in Washington at 8 a. m. and two hours afterward will confer with Vice President Garner, House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley and Speaker William Bankhead on the legislative situation.

Later in the day he will be told of the progress of his recovery program in a discussion with Harry Hopkins and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Conferences at Once.

President Roosevelt, returning this morning from a ten-day fishing cruise in Southern waters, will confer immediately with Congressional leaders on the preadjournment drive for enactment of main items in his program for this session.

The Chief Executive finds the legislative situation greatly improved, from his standpoint, since he departed April 29 for Charleston, S. C., to board the cruiser Philadelphia.

Maverick Urges South to Join in Social Progress

Rules Committee Must Be Revamped to Serve Party, He Says.

By Representative Maury Maverick.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

It looks as though President Roosevelt's wage-hour bill will be enacted—and connected with it are political schisms and revolutions; and whether the South will master the Democratic Party or go down the line with the other Democrats of the country.

Last session the bill was defeated with solid opposition of nearly every Southern Representative, plus conservative Democrats and Republicans. This time the bill was petitioned out as if by magic, contributing factors being resentment of the high handedness of the rules committee, resentment against the national chamber of commerce for its impudent demand for repeal of the national labor relations act, Senator Claude Pepper's renomination in Florida, and the fact that the rival labor leaders, John L. Lewis and William Green, were fighting together for the wage-hour bill, instead of against each other.

Attacks Rules Group.

But that is not the story. The story is the Rules Committee, whose overwhelming majority is Southern Democrat and Republican and which fought stubbornly against the wage-hour bill. It is supposed to be the party committee to bring out party bills pledged by platform and agreed on by leaders. However, the committee prevented this pledged and oft-promised bill from going to the floor for a vote, and because this committee has become the high censor and ruler of the party, resentment has increased, and the first chance the House had to repudiate them, it did.

The composition of the Democratic Party has always been a quilt patched with many colors. Far Western Townsendites, Middle Western agricos, big city (including Tammany) and liberals and progressives from here and there, and the South.

And the South, from where I come, pays the lowest wages, has the worst housing and the lowest standard of living in America. The people of the South know it, and every time they have had a chance, they have demanded better—they did it in Alabama in the election of Senator Lister Hill, and then in Florida with Senator Pepper.

Cites "Technicalities."

All of which is strange when one considers it is the Southern delegations which have killed any legislation like that. The last wage-hour bill was rather weak and they defeated it; now comes a more drastic one, which will no doubt pass.

Two questions are now brought to a head. One is technical, and the other of national social importance. The one is the highhanded behavior of the Rules Committee. The public cannot understand these technicalities; all it wants to know is whether the Democrats deliver the goods, or not.

And unless Democratic leadership and the party gets a system, including rules, where its pledges are fulfilled it will be repudiated, as it should be.

The other point is the South. The South is for the good old time virtues, but is not averse to taking a few billions of gold from the Federal till for the TVA, for cotton subsidies, WPA and others.

Warns of Recalcitrance.

As a Southern Congressman I have not fought, very bitterly, appropriations for my district. But when a general bill is offered, the South is liable to pull Thomas Jefferson from the grave, and swear it's coddling the people.

As a Congressman from the South—I speak alone for myself—I believe that if we pass out subsidies for cotton plantation owners and ranchmen and rice growers and all the rest—that labor should have some protection too. And the South is not entitled to any special favors.

Not alone on this wages bill, but on other legislation, hinges the question whether the South goes along with the rest of the Nation. If it does not, a combination of other factors may isolate it, and laws may be forced down its throat, and knowing Americans as I do, I know my Texas and every part of the union can get a fair deal if we are fair ourselves.

As for me, I am for throwing in with the Yankees and the Liberals, the agricultural boys of the West—and the big city Democrats, too. That is the only way the Democratic Party can do a good job, and serve America.

Baptist Women Open Convention

Richmond, Va., May 8 (AP).—More than 4,000 Southern Baptist women opened the convention of the Women's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Southern Baptist convention, this afternoon with an elaborate religious celebration of their golden jubilee.

Back in Richmond, where 32 women from 10 states followed their husbands to the Southern Baptist convention in 1868 and timidly organized the first Southern union, the convention praised God for half a century of success, paid tribute to early leaders and reviewed their history up to the jubilee year.

The union convention, which precedes the Southern Baptist convention expected to bring 10,000 people to Richmond for meetings Thursday through Sunday, will turn to business, reports and plans for 1938 at its meetings tomorrow.

New Dealer to Oppose Smith in Senate Race

Columbia, S. C., May 8 (AP).—State Senator Edgar A. Brown, of Barnwell, announced himself today as "a New Deal candidate" for the United States Senate seat now held by Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith.

Brown, who made an unsuccessful campaign against Smith in 1926, pledged his "wholehearted and enthusiastic approval" of "President Roosevelt's great objectives for social justice and economic recovery."

Other announced candidates are Theo H. Vaughn, of Clemson, and Ashton H. Williams, of Florence.

Col. Sultan Considers Traffic Most Urgent Problem in D. C.

Harris & Ewing.

COL. DANIEL I. SULTAN.

Dupont, Scott and Thomas Circles Are Most Seriously Congested Areas, He Believes; Many Projects Started in His Four Years.

By Christine Sadler

As Col. Dan I. Sultan completes his fourth year as Engineer Commissioner for the District of Columbia, before he is detailed to other duties, he is able to point to an imposing list of completed projects—but he prefers to look ahead to things yet to be done.

The most pressing need of Washington today, as he sees it, is "for structures to separate traffic where it is most seriously congested." Among the most seriously congested areas he places the "three circles"—DuPont, Scott, and Thomas; the point where Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway intersects K street; and the point where Fourteenth and Water streets come together.

"Something must be done at the latter place to permit a steady flow of traffic on Water street and toward the Highway Bridge," he declares.

Would Replace Bridges.

The Highway and Railroad bridges are at present adequate to traffic needs, but are so unsightly that they must come down and a bridge of the Memorial Bridge type or a tunnel used to replace them, he believes—if the city is to live up to its claim for beauty. Eventually, traffic would necessitate changes there, anyway, he points out.

Something must be done, also, to provide in some way for by-pass routes that will permit through traffic especially trucks—to pass the District without coming through it. Such routes, he declares, should really be outside the District, either in Virginia or Maryland.

"This would mean a bridge somewhere above Great Falls or at Alexandria, or below," he says.

Many Projects.

Col. Sultan has been intensely interested in the development of the Washington water front and hopes that the work started will not be too long delayed in completion.

If Col. Sultan should ever want to look back at projects started or completed during his four years here, he could see: Calvert Street Bridge, Chain Bridge, the new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, the new Tuberculosis Hospital at Glen Dale, Md., the sewage treatment plant, Woodrow Wilson and Anacostia high schools, the Georgetown and Petworth libraries, and dozens of elementary and junior high schools. Despite the many needs yet to be filled, then, it is evident that construction in the City of Washington really does move right along.

"There are many other things for which we could wish, but the cost must always be remembered. I am hoping that the District will be able to participate in the new PWA provisions on the same basis as the States and that other projects will be put into operation as a result. I would be opposed to the District going into debt with a bond issue, but I am in favor of PWA projects.

Wants Creek Purified.

"In addition to our traffic needs, we need to be thinking immediately about moving pollution from Rock Creek. That is a combined District and Maryland problem. And thought should be given to removal of pollution from the Anacostia River, which is a Maryland problem. School buildings and hospital facilities are badly needed. The municipal center buildings are also certainly on the list," he declares.

A native of Mississippi and a West Point graduate, Colonel Sultan has seen service in numerous parts of the world. He received the Distinguished Service medal during the World War and was awarded several medals for his services in connection with the survey of the Nicaragua Canal.

As he prepares to leave Washington he is emphatic in his belief that the District of Columbia government "is honestly and efficiently administered" and that no change in the form of government is necessary here from those two viewpoints.

Fond of Daughters.

"If the people want to elect their own officials, that is another matter; but certainly the present government is efficiently and honestly administered," he declares.

Col. Sultan has been too busy attending board meetings and thinking about engineering projects during the past four years to pay much attention to hobbies; but it is evident that his two young daughters hold an important place in his thoughts. Whatever daughters cost in money, in his opinion, "they're worth it."

Gov. Aiken Writing 60,000-Word Book

Putney, Vt., May 8 (U.P.).—Gov. George D. Aiken, of Vermont, possible Republican Presidential candidate in 1940, announced today he is writing a 60,000-word book, "Speaking From Vermont," for fall publication.

Writing from the viewpoint of a Vermont hill farmer, the Governor-nurseryman will try to show some of the "upper third" why some of the "middle third" think as they do.

Aiken said it would not be difficult to draw "political inferences" from his book.

TWA Airline Loses $590,079 on Mail

New York, May 8 (U.P.).—A net loss of $590,079 by the Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., during the first three months of 1938, was shown in a report released today.

Jack Frye, president of the company, said the loss was partly caused by a drop in air-mail revenues, while passenger miles showed an increase of 23 per cent over the same period a year ago.

Frye said the company has applied for increased air-mail rates, and expects a decision "within the next few months."

Labor Ranks Are Split In Harrison County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 8.—Labor forces are split here. The Central Labor Union of Harrison County has expelled C. I. O. delegates by order of the head officers of the American Federation of Labor, while others of John L. Lewis' organization have voluntarily withdrawn from the central union, including the United Mine Workers of America and the local union of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers.

Dimond Stresses Value of Alaska

Alaska's importance in any scheme for national defense was emphasized Saturday in a radio speech by Delegate Anthony J. Dimond, of the United States' northernmost territory.

Any attack on this country would come via the Pacific, Dimond asserted, and the shortest route from the Orient—running close to the Aleutian Islands, which are 2,300 miles north of Hawaii—would be the most vulnerable, he pointed out.

With the exception of 300 troops at Chilkoot Barracks and six naval airplanes at Sitka, Alaska has no defensive forces, Dimond declared. Control of Alaska means control of the North Pacific and of the short route to the Orient, he added.

Nonpartisan League Quits Lemke in Race

Bismarck, N. Dak., May 8 (AP).—The North Dakota Nonpartisan League's advisory council, meeting with the organization's State executive committee, today withdrew its support from Representative William Lemke, North Dakota Republican, for re-election.

The council said Lemke, who ran for President of the United States under the Union Party banner in 1936, had failed to definitely accept the league's indorsement and pledge his support to its ticket for the June primary.

Jersey City Riot Thwarted, Says Rep. O'Connell

Will Ask President to Oust Mayor Hague for Denying Right to Talk Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Jerry O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, said last night that his failure to speak in Jersey City Saturday night had thwarted plans to start a riot there and "beat up" foes of Mayor Frank Hague.

He told reporters he was disappointed and disgusted, however, that his sponsors had decided against him and Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, going through with their threatened defiance of Jersey City's ban against speech-making without a permit.

O'Connell vowed that he would invade Hague's stronghold and speak a week from next Saturday, accompanied, if possible, by a substantial group of other Congressmen.

Riot Plot Told.

Returning to the Capital from New York with Bernard, he said he had learned that, had he reached the scene of that night's scheduled address, two bands were to have struck up "America" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

When they finished playing, he said, a riot was to have been started, "innocent supporters" beaten up and his own group loaded into a police car and taken to headquarters for "arrest or deportation."

His immediate next step, he said, would be to write President Roosevelt and James A. Farley, the Democratic National chairman, urging that Mayor Hague be ousted as vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

"Hague's violation of Constitutional rights is a disgrace to the Democratic Party," O'Connell declared.

He said he would ask the President to see him personally and discuss the situation.

Seeks Senate Probe.

O'Connell also disclosed he would ask the Senate Civil Liberties Committee to investigate "violation of civil rights" in Jersey City. Chairman La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, of that committee, commented that it now has no funds for such an inquiry but has asked the Senate for an additional $60,000. This request is in the hands of the Senate audit and control committee, headed by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

La Follette said a request that the civil liberties group make an investigation in Jersey City had been received some time ago from Morris Ernst, New York lawyer then representing "some unions which were trying to organize in Jersey City." If the additional funds were granted, he added, the request would be considered along with many other pending ones.

O'Connell declared leaders among small business men and some members of the "rank and file" of A. F. of L. unions had promised to help him in his next attempt to speak against Hague.

Pastor Flays Hague.

New York, May 8 (U.P.).—The Jersey City, N. J., controversy over the right of two Congressmen to speak there against Mayor Frank Hague was described today as "a challenge to President Roosevelt" in a sermon by the Dr. Charles Francis Potter.

Dr. Potter, pastor of the First Humanist Church here, said the President "cannot afford to condone this outrage, even if Hague is one of the prominent men in his party."

"If the President and Congress," he added, "do not publicly reprove Mayor Hague and his supporters at once, we may as well start teaching the goosestep in our public schools."

Animals Survive Freight's Crash at 100 Mi. Per Hour

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 8 (U.P.).—Startled farmers along the right of way of the Rock Island Railroad thought a tornado had struck today until they saw 17 runaway freight cars roar downgrade at almost 100 miles an hour. The 17 cars, carrying cattle and coal, had traveled 20 miles down from Falcon, Colo., 500 feet higher than Colorado Springs. Only casualty listed was one steer.

An extra freight train, railroad officials said, left here this morning. The 17 cars were uncoupled at Falcon for unloading. They started rolling. Railroad men purposely derailed them here.

When the train was derailed, it was traveling at such a speed that one tool car was thrown 75 yards. A broken freight car wheel struck a water tank 150 feet away and 75 feet above the ground.

Va. Groups Seek To Keep Mail Line

It has been announced that the service may be abandoned and the five ships operated by the company used in a run to Pacific Coast ports through the Panama Canal.

Machine for Writing in the Sky Puffs Out 15 Letters a Minute

This drawing shows how airplanes, by drawing smoke-laden pipes under them, may write 200-foot letters in the sky in the future. The device was invented by J. T. Remey, of New York City, and may be tried out here soon.

Operators in Plane Will Punch Keyboard Like a Linotype; Apparatus Works Best From Blimps, Autogyros, Lawyer Here Says.

Smoke signs 200 feet high, typed out at 15 letters a minute by an operator in an airplane, shortly may float over Washington.

Tests on new apparatus for 'sky-typing" are shortly to be held near New York City. If they are successful, the 400-pound apparatus may be brought to Washington and tried out from either an autogyro or blimp, Martin F. Fisher, local patent lawyer, indicated last night.

Invented by John T. Remey, of New York, "sky-typing" apparatus uses a 200-foot hollow pipe, with openings every 5 inches, which hangs from the cabin of the plane or blimp. An electric keyboard in the plane controls the openings in the pipe, and smoke-forming material is forced out as each valve is opened.

U. S. to Ease Examiners' Zeal So Banks Will Be More Liberal

Morgenthau Asks Agencies to See If More Loans Can't Be Approved; FDIC, Comptroller's Office Held Most Severe.

By the Associated Press.

Heads of Federal banking agencies will meet today to consider relaxing restrictions so as to encourage banks to make more loans to businessmen.

Banks don't like to make loans which examiners will criticize, Secretary Morgenthau, with this in mind, has asked the Federal Reserve Board, Comptroller of the Currency and Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to look into their examining methods to determine if there are any types of loans which have been, but should not be, criticized.

Informed persons said the Reserve Board favored slight relaxation, but was having difficulty convincing the comptroller's office and the FDIC. They predicted a compromise would be worked out which would permit banks to make, without criticism, loans up to approximately five years, provided ample security was given and arrangements made to make part payments on the loan at regular periods of, for instance, every six months.

Officials explained that classification of loans was almost entirely a matter of personal judgment on the part of examiners. There are no fixed rules to determine for how long a bank should lend money. The examining agencies, however, have held to the general rule that a bank's proper function is in the short-term credit field.

When an examiner looks over a bank's loans, he divides them into these groups: Good, slow, doubtful and loss. The "doubtful" and "loss" groups are not involved in the Federal discussion, only the "slow" loan type.

Officials said no satisfactory definition of a "slow" loan had been made, but one example given involved a hypothetical five-year loan made three years ago. The loan has two years yet to run and, therefore, is not delinquent, doubtful or lost. But, as a matter of good business, the borrower should have paid off part of it by now and hasn't.

In such a case, the examiner probably would call the bank's attention to the loan and the bank in turn would be expected to discuss it with the borrower, telling him that for his own good as well as the bank's he ought to be arranging at least part payment on the debt.

Reports Persist Earle Will Block Inquiry by Jury

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—Reports persisted tonight that the George H. Earle administration would ask the State Supreme Court to block a Dauphin County (Harrisburg) investigation of primary election campaign charges of "bought" legislation and coercion of State employes.

Carl B. Shelley, Dauphin County district attorney, has said he will fight any attempt to interfere with the investigation, scheduled to start May 11.

The Philadelphia Inquirer said in a copyrighted story the petition would be presented to the Supreme Court tomorrow.

Attorney General Guy K. Bard has said the investigation may interfere with the proper conduct of the State government.

Ford to Carry Labor Fight to Supreme Court

Seeks to Prevent Board From Regaining Jurisdiction Over Case.

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Ky., May 8.—Counsel for the Ford Motor Co. notified the National Labor Relations Board today of intention to carry to the United States Supreme Court its fight to prevent the board from regaining jurisdiction of its case against the company.

Frederick H. Wood, chief Ford counsel, telegraphed that he would appear before the Sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals here tomorrow to present a petition "to stay the order of the court permitting withdrawal of the petition (for an enforcement order), pending application to the Supreme Court or any other court of competent jurisdiction for relief from the order, and pending decision upon any such application."

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—The National Labor Relations Board gave notice today it would appear in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals Monday to fight a restraining order that prevented it temporarily from reopening its case against the Republic Steel Corporation.

The case came to the Third Circuit Court in Republic's appeal from the N. L. R. B. order to reinstate 5,000 employes dismissed at five Ohio plants in the "Little Steel" strike last year.

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor Saturday chartered a local union in the Hershey Chocolate Co. plant at Hershey, Pa., and said it would seek certification by the National Labor Relations Board as exclusive bargaining agency for all employes.

Committee for Industrial Organization leaders promptly charged the federation with taking over a "company union"—the Independent Chocolate Workers of Hershey—which the Hershey company agreed to disestablish in a stipulation the N. L. R. B. approved Friday.

Industrial Net 67.5 Per Cent Under Year Ago

Profits of 280 Corporations for Quarter Analyzed by Bank.

New York, May 8.—First quarter profits of 280 corporations engaged in manufacturing and trade, analyzed today by the National City Bank, show combined net of approximately $100,000,000, compared with $309,000,000 for the same companies in the first quarter of 1937, a decline of 67.5 per cent. In the final quarter of 1937, the bank points out, the corporations included in the survey had net profits of $210,000,000. The profits for the first quarter of this year were at a rate of 3.7 per cent on capital and surplus, compared with a rate of 12 per cent in the first quarter of last year.

The bank notes that changes in profits among the different industrial groups were extremely uneven, the sales of many companies in the amusement, food and petroleum industries being relatively well maintained with only a slight diminution in profits. Profits of some of the large baking companies were above those of a year ago partly because of lower prices for flour purchased. The bank's letter continues:

"In most other lines the trend was sharply downward, and in numerous instances the profits disappeared entirely. The drop was particularly severe in industries such as automobiles and accessories, building materials, electrical equipment, household goods and supplies, iron and steel, machinery, railway equipment, textiles and apparel, and also in merchandising lines."

Army Prepared To Meet Foes, Mothers Told

Audience in Arlington Hears Brig. Gen. Beck Laud Military Strength.

The United States Army is prepared to defend the country "against all enemies, foreign and domestic," Brig. Gen. Robert M. Beck, jr., assistant chief of staff, yesterday told an audience of 4,000 at a Mothers Day observance in Arlington Amphitheater.

"In time of peace we need but modest forces," Gen. Beck said, "but we are ready to expand our army enormously in an emergency."

Gen. Beck appealed for the same moral support American mothers gave the Nation in 1917-18, if war should come again.

Speaking for the American War Mothers, Mrs. Irving Fairweather, national president, said, "Mothers in every land join us in our prayer that the world be spared another war." She read greetings from Mrs. Roosevelt and Lady Nancy Astor.

Applaud Elsie Janis.

The appearance of Elsie Janis, famous "Sweetheart of the A. E. F.," was greeted with enthusiastic applause by the audience. A thundering "No" answered the entertainer's repitition of the war-time query, "Are we downhearted?"

At the conclusion of ceremonies in the amphitheater, colors of various patriotic organizations were massed around the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier during the laying of wreaths.

A Mother's Day service was combined with dedication exercises held yesterday by Opportunity House in its new home at 78 I street northwest.

Senator Capper Speaks.

Speakers included Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas; Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of Opportunity House.

The Catholic Police and Firemen Society held its fifth annual Mother's Day communion breakfast in the Willard Hotel. Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Representative John S. McGroarty (Democrat), of California; Maj. Ernest W. Brown and the Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities, spoke to the group.

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard addressed the annual Mother's Day banquet of the Young Men's Christian Association. The day was marked by the Girl's Glee Club and Hospice of the Volunteers of America with a music recital directed by Esther Linkins.

Mother's Day was observed with special services in churches of the city.

Picketing Is Voted Against Cafeterias In U. S. Buildings

United Cafeteria Employes Union officials said picketing of cafeterias in Government buildings would begin next Monday unless the Welfare and Recreational Association, operator of the cafeterias, agrees to negotiations.

According to Jack Mink, business agent of the C. I. O. affiliate, "this is the union's answer to the association's stubborn attitude and refusal to deal with its employes' representatives." The union voted unanimously to picket the cafeterias at a meeting last Friday.

A meeting of C. I. O. officials and representatives of Secretary Ickes to discuss the situation is scheduled for this afternoon. The union claims 70 per cent of the 700 cafeteria employes.

Garage Employe Stops Fleeing Car With Rifle Bullet

Hagerstown, May 8.—Federal investigators will arrive here tomorrow to obtain custody of Henry D. Potter, 21, and Niles Smith, alias Philip Aiken, 23, seized near Hopewell, Washington County, after a gas station attendant stopped the car in which they were riding with a rifle bullet in a rear tire.

The pair came to the station yesterday, had the car filled with gasoline and drove off without paying. The attendant grabbed up a rifle, stopping the car with a well placed bullet.

Officers coming on the scene seized the pair, who admitted that the car was stolen in Bedford, Pa., and was the property of Charles E. Householder, Miami, Fla. Both said they were from South Bend, Ind., but papers found in Potter's pocket indicated he is or had been attached to Fort Belvoir, Va.

Man Survives 75-Foot Plunge Off Key Bridge

Capital Resident Pulled From Potomac River by Two Boatmen.

Robert Cave, 31, of the 1200 block Thirty - fifth street northwest, plunged 75 feet from the west side of Key Bridge into the Potomac River yesterday before the eyes of scores of Sunday boaters, and escaped serious injury.

Rescued by two young men in a motorboat almost as soon as he struck the water, Cave was taken to Dempsey's Boathouse, Georgetown. While awaiting removal to Emergency Hospital, Cave moaned that "someone asked me for a match and then pushed me off the bridge."

A few moments later, Rodney Dawson, who said he was Cave's father-in-law, arrived at the boathouse. He asserted he and Cave were walking across Key Bridge to Rosslyn when the younger man suddenly turned to him, said he was going to jump, and leaped over the bridge wall.

Guy Windsor, of Falls Church, Va., a passerby, said he noticed Cave with another man and then saw Cave jump from the bridge.

Dawson declared his son-in-law had threatened to jump from the bridge Saturday, but was dissuaded by a policeman. According to Dawson, Cave had been drinking on both days. Dawson said his daughter and Cave had been separated several years. Cave, he added, is a landscape gardener at Greenbelt, Md.

Cave's wife, Mrs. Lucille Cave, was in the crowd that watched Cave's removal from the boathouse. As the injured man was taken past her on a stretcher she fainted. After examination at Emergency Hospital, Cave was taken to Gallinger, where Dr. Amino Perretti said he was suffering from acute alcoholism and back injuries.

Rescuers of Cave were Howard Bradbury, jr., 24, of 1608 Crittenden street northwest, and John N. Tomasian, 24, of 1735 Wisconsin avenue.

While a nation yesterday paid tribute to its mothers, one young man learned for the first time he may have no mother.

Ralph Roberts Fowley, of Gaithersburg, Md., reached his twenty-first birthday only to learn he had been adopted from Children's Hospital when he was three years old.

Ralph was taken to the hospital for treatment for rickets when he was one year old, records show. His mother, Mrs. Mary Roberts, then lived in Takoma Park, Md., later was remarried, and the hospital lost trace of her.

Son Woman Thought Buried Comes Home on Mother's Day

She Faints on Return of Boy She Thought Was Body, Shot a Year Ago, Which She Identified and Carried to Grave.

Masontown, Pa., May 8 (U.P.).—This Mother's Day story is odd to everyone but Mrs. Phoebe Fiore. To her, it is as simple as this. Her son has come back from the dead—the boy she thought she buried more than a year ago.

Fifteen-year-old Donald Fiore walked into his step-father's tailor shop on the eve of Mother's Day. He said, "Hello, Pop," and walked on into a rear apartment, where the family lives.

Donald called, "Hello Mom." Mrs. Fiore looked up. Her face whitened, and she fainted.

Mrs. Fiore and Raymond Fiore buried a youth in February, 1937, they thought was Donald. Mrs. Fiore had gone to Olive Hill, Ky., to bring back the body of a boy shot to death there. She identified the body as that of Donald, who had run away, by scars on the leg and forehead.

Donald told of having gone out "to see the world" when he ran away in February, 1936, at the age of 13. He hitch-hiked to California, then worked in Florida orange groves and later on a South Carolina farm. He became homesick, and planned a Mother's Day surprise for Mrs. Fiore, not knowing his parents thought him dead.

Now, the Fiores wonder whose young son is buried in a card-marked grave at Leckrone Cemetery.

Frederick Increases Tax Base $1,231,850

Frederick, Md., May 8 (AP).—Frederick County's tax base was increased $1,231,850 through a study of securities listed on Federal income tax returns, Alfred W. Gaver, county supervisor of assessments, announced today.

A recent Federal law allows local units to check the income tax returns for four years back. Baltimore City recently reported discovery of hitherto untaxed securities by that method.

Mother Urges Bassett Killer To Confess All

'Never Regret This Step,' Aged Convict Writes to Life-Termer Son.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, May 8. — A bizarre Mother's Day appeal went out today from Mrs. Mary Eleanor Smith, aged convict, to her life-termer son, De Castro Earl Mayer, begging him to disclose all the details of the "confessed" murder of James Eugene Bassett, ten years ago.

Addressing the 43-year-old habitual criminal as "My darling boy," Mrs. Smith suggested only a full confession could "rectify the terrible past."

At the same time State Parole Board Chairman William J. Wilkins credited Mrs. Margaret Helen Thompson Paddleford Fawcett, Mrs. Smith's cellmate, with having paved the way for police to maneuver the aged woman into a confession.

Mrs. Smith entrusted her fantastic Mother's Day missive to Seattle Detective Capt. Ernest Yoris for delivery to Mayer. Yoris went to the State Prison at Walla Walla to return Mayer here to face indictment for murder.

Mrs. Smith confessed her son posed as a prospective purchaser of Bassett's car, lured him to their home near here, slew him with a hammer.

She told Yoris portions of the body were buried in four places in northern King County, but was unable to recall the exact burial in two trips over wooded sideroads.

"Never, never regret this step, Earl, may dear," Mrs. Smith wrote. "I fully believe you are not responsible, and I will take my stand with you. My heart pleads for poor Mrs. Bassett."

Wilkins said Mrs. Fawcett, serving a term of 15 years for defrauding a Seattle dress shop, won Mrs. Smith's confidence and "urged her to get right with God," thus setting the stage for a State officer, posing as a clergyman and confessor. Over a period of a year, the "clergyman" and Mrs. Fawcett worked on Mrs. Smith until she was finally admitting incriminating details of her son's acts, Wilkins reported.

Former D.C. Pupil Killed at Atlanta

Joseph Leroy Skehan, 29, former resident of Takoma Park, Md., was killed yesterday in a motorcycle accident at Atlanta, Ga., relatives in Takoma Park said last night.

Skehan, who has operated a garage in Atlanta for four years, was testing a motorcycle at time of the accident.

Born in Takoma Park, he was educated in schools there and at Technical High School in Washington. He has been engaged in the garage business with his brother-in-law, Jerome Vogt, also formerly of Takoma Park.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jewell Vogt Skehan, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Louis C. Vogt, of Takoma Park; a 5-year-old daughter, Charlene; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Skehan, of Takoma Park, and a sister, Jacqueline, also of Takoma Park.

Funeral services and burial will be in Atlanta Wednesday.

Jury to Decide If Baby Shall Die or Go Blind

9 Doctors, 3 Rabbis Consent to Determine Fate of Child Suffering Disease.

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—A jury of 12 men—9 doctors and 3 rabbis—was selected today to decide the "death or blindness" dilemma confronting the parents of Baby Helaine Colan, Dr. and Mrs. Herman Colan.

Dr. Morris Hershman and Attorney Samuel Hoffman announced the jury would meet tomorrow morning, examine the 5-week-old child suffering from glioma and decide whether to operate for removal of the eyes, or let Nature take its course, which doctors said would end with death.

The jury includes:

Dr. Irving S. Cutter, dean of the Northwestern University Medical School, chairman; Dr. Maurice H. Cottle, of Illinois Masonic Hospital; Dr. Sanford Gifford of Northwestern University; Dr. Max N. # Washington Man, 25, Is Killed, Eight Hurt in Auto Accidents

A man was killed and eight persons were injured, several seriously, in a series of automobile accidents in nearby sections of Maryland shortly before dawn yesterday.

John Gedgate, 25, of 1216 Otis street northeast, died in Sibley Hospital soon after his removal from the scene of a three-car collision on the Baltimore boulevard at Beltsville.

According to the police, Gedgate was riding in an automobile operated by Bernard Broughton, 21, of the 4300 block of Twelfth street northeast. The latter suffered head injuries.

Agnes, 19, and Felicia Neville, 20, both of Baltimore, also were injured in the accident. They were passengers in an automobile driven by Leonard Behrems, 25, of Baltimore, who was injured slightly.

Gedgate worked in a restaurant in Brookland with Broughton.

Four colored persons were injured when their automobile crashed in a culvert and overturned on the Baltimore boulevard, near Muirkirk.

Japanese Lift Guerrilla Siege Of Yangtze Base

Gates at Peiping Reopened; Southern Provinces Entering War.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, May 8.—Japanese military authorities today reported a smashing victory over a Chinese guerrilla force in North China.

The victory was announced by the Japanese while the defenders received news that Kweichow and Yunnan provinces, in southwest China, heretofore relatively indifferent to the war, had lined up their vast area and resources in support of the Chinese cause.

The Japanese said reinforcements crushed the guerrillas who had attempted to cut off Nantungchow, important supply base for 10,000 Japanese fighters. The town is 60 miles north of Shanghai on the Yangtze River.

Gates Reopened.

(At Peiping, Japanese-held North China city, all gates, closed when reports circulated 13,000 Chinese irregulars were in the vicinity, were reopened.

(Although no guerrillas were to be found just outside the city, where they had been reported in great numbers, apprehension persisted in Peiping. The irregulars were known to be in possession of some towns less than 20 miles away.)

Japanese said the victory at Nantungchow relieved danger which had threatened a Japanese column moving north through Kiangsu Province.

This column is aiming at the Lunghai Railway from the south in an attempt to break the four-month stalemate to the west, where the Japanese have failed to penetrate the Lunghai zone.

Deadlock continued on the northern and southern sections of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway despite steadily increasing forces on both sides. The Japanese acknowledge week-end operations had failed to materially change the war map in those areas.

Foreign observers brought first-hand information from southwest China that Kweichow and Yunnan, with a combined population of at least 20,000,000, had started a Herculean effort to pour men and munitions into the war.

Highway Started.

Foreseeing a stoppage of traffic on the important Canton-Hankow Railroad, over which flow munitions for the Chinese, the provinces have set to work to build a 750-mile emergency highway from Yunnanfu to Chungking.

Traversing mountainous country, this highway "lifeline" could be used, if the occasion arose, for the transportation of munitions from India and French Indo-China into the Yangtze Valley.

In addition, the observers said 60,000 trained Yunnanese troops were heading northward toward the front lines ready for immediate combat duty.

Japanese Leave Island.

Chinese reported from Hongkong today Japanese naval forces had adopted more intensive harassing tactics along the south China coast since Vice Admiral Koshiro Oilawa took command, April 30, of the Japanese third fleet.

Two days ago a Japanese cruiser landed a force of marines on Ballast Island, 5 miles southwest of Portuguese Macao in the delta of the Canton River, but later evacuated them under fire.

On the same day 400 other Marines were repulsed in an attempted landing near Swabue, about 60 miles northeast of Honkong on the east side of the delta. Chinese reports said this force left 50 dead.

Daladier Parades With Semi-Fascists In Joan of Arc Day

Paris, May 8 (AP).—France's semi-fascist parties paraded today in Joan of Arc day celebrations.

With tricolor banners flying and with palms extended in stiff-arm salutes, the nationalists marched through the streets of Paris and other principal cities.

Premier Edouard Daladier, whose national defense union of conservative parties replaced the Chautemps government April 10, joined in the Paris observance before the statue of The Maid, opposite the Louvre palace.

Davila Reads to U.S. Rumanians Message From King's Opponent

Cleveland, May 8.—Charles A. Davila, former Rumanian Minister to the United States, speaking at a mass meeting of the Union of Rumanian Societies of America here this afternoon, read a message from Juliu Maniu, of Rumania, leader of the Democratic National-Peasant Party and chief opponent of King Carol.

The message was cabled from Paris because of strict Rumanian censorship. Addressed to Americans of Rumanian origin, it said:

"The spiritual participation of the Union of the Rumanian Societies of America in our struggle to save the dignity of the Rumanian nation and to defeat the dictatorship imposed upon our country, filled me with deep joy.

"We stand staunchly on the side of the great Western democracies, whose brilliant spokesman is your great President, Franklin Roosevelt. We are determined to make all the sacrifices for the triumph of liberty and democracy.

"To you, our brothers, who crossed oceans to find liberty and opportunity of free living, who have not forgotten the people of the same blood in the mother country, suffering today under the yoke of tyranny, I send my warmest brotherly greetings."

460 Canadians Taken in Spain By Insurgents

New Volunteers Captured as Franco Widens His Hold on Coast.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, May 8.—Several hundred Canadian volunteers of the loyalist international brigades were reported trapped and captured tonight when parallel insurgent armies swept past them and on down the Mediterranean.

The motorized insurgent forces, composed of Castilians, Navarrese and Galicians, drove a double-pronged attack down the coast to within 23 miles of Castellon de la Plana.

Insurgent dispatches said Gen. Miguel Aranda's forces were on the outskirts of Torreblanca, gateway to the "Desert of Palms" along the road to Valencia, 64 miles away.

460 Captured.

Aranda trapped the Canadian troops between Alcala de Chivert on the coastal road and Cuevas de Vinroma, 10 miles inland on another highway to Castellon.

Of the 460 prisoners taken in the operation almost all were said to have been new Canadian volunteers recently brought up from a training camp at Cuenca.

As result of the drive on Torreblanca, the insurgent hold on the coast was widened to a strip of 52 miles.

Insurgent officers said the sweep down the coast was purposely being retarded to permit other columns, operating inland between Morella and Aliaga, south of Castellote, to close a big pocket on thousands of loyalist mountain fighters near Cantuviejа. The latter town is 42 miles inland, midway between the coast and Teruel.

Gen. Garcia Valino's insurgent force south of Morella continued its drive to break the eastern wall of the loyalist salient, fighting through ankle-deep mud.

Insurgent Ships Flee.

Gibraltar, May 8 (AP).—The British destroyer Grafton today drove off two insurgent armed trawlers attempting to attack the British tanker Refast, formerly the American Nantucket Chief.

The Refast, which as the Nantucket Chief was captured and released early this year by the insurgents, was bound for Valencia and Barcelona today when the trawlers gave chase. The insurgent vessels dashed away when the Grafton appeared.

Japan's Losses In China Peril 3-Power Treaty

Reich General Staff Doubts Value of Friendly Policy Toward Nipponese.

By the United Press.

Berlin, May 8.—Japan's difficulties in China are causing some officers of the German general staff to doubt the advisability of continuing the loose German-Japanese military alliance implied in the anti-communist declaration of the two powers and Italy, the United Press learned tonight.

The German-Japanese declaration has been considered here as aimed at Soviet Russia and designed to imply joint military action by the two powers if either becomes involved with Russia.

In this connection, according to informants, the German general staff is beginning to wonder just how effective the Japanese would be against Russia. The feeling now is that, judged by its record in China, the Japanese military machine might be of doubtful value.

Germans are concerned at the prospects of losing their considerable markets in China if Japan succeeds, and are determined to continue supplying war equipment to the Chinese.

Officially Germany continues to be pro-Japanese. The government-controlled press prints only news of Japanese victories and parrots from time to time Germany's sympathy for Japanese efforts to prevent communism from engulfing the Chinese people.

Unofficially there is a growing sentiment throughout the Reich for China and her "Fuehrer," Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

And it is significant that there is no talk of recalling the German military advisers, headed by Gen. Von Falkenhausen, who organized the modern Chinese army and now are reported actively assisting the front-line Chinese commanders in the great battle for the Lung-hai Railway.

Soviet Fiction Head On Trial for Bribes

Moscow, May 8 (U.P.).—N. N. Nakoriakov, former director of the fiction department of the State publishing house, will go on trial with his chief bookkeeper, P. G. Harkunov, on charges of misusing State funds, it was announced today.

Nakoriakov is accused of misusing 500,000 rubles on advances to authors in 1937, and with dissipating 1,000,000 rubles on publications which never appeared for sale. He also was alleged to have received large bribes from authors.

Britain to Urge Moderation On Hitler in Czech Problem

Outline of Prague's Latest Plan for Solution of Sudeten Nazi Autonomy Demands Is Awaited by London Foreign Office.

By the United Press.

London, May 8.—Great Britain, acting in the role of mediator, may ask Dictator Hitler to advise a course of moderation for the autonomy demands of Czechoslovakia's 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans, it was reported tonight.

An outline of the Czechoslovak government's latest plan for solution of the Sudeten Nazi problem is awaited at the foreign office as a result of the British minister's formal representation to Prague Saturday, advising "maximum concessions" in dealing with the Sudeten demands.

Another report is awaited from the British embassy in Berlin, which made similar representations to the German government.

The British approaches were paralleled by the French.

The impression grew in London that, although it has drafted a proposed minority statute giving the Sudentens "concessions far beyond anything thus far proposed," the Prague government may respond to the British and French appeals and draft an even more far-reaching statute.

The revised statute, it was said, may apply not only to the Sudeten Germans under Konrad Henlein, minority leader, but would benefit all other minorities, such as Poles and Hungarians, in whose behalf protests have been raised.

The plan of mediation envisaged in London provides:

The Prague government will reveal to Britain and France the maximum concessions it is prepared to make.

Britain will make a second approach to Berlin, reviewing the Czech proposals, which probably would lead to further negotiations between Henlein and Premier Hodza of Czechoslovakia.

If the second British approach to Berlin is successful, Hitler will be asked to approach Henlein and advise the latter as to what attitude Hitler feels the Czech sudetens should adopt.

Britain and France, meanwhile, would continue by diplomatic means to exert pressure on Poland and Hungary in an effort to persuade these countries to co-operate in a pacific settlement of the problems of Czechoslovakia's minorities.

Breach Widened.

By the United Press.

Prague, May 8.—The Anglo-French demarche to Prague regarding the Sudenten German minority problem has widened the breach separating the Czech government's conciliatory attitude and general public opinion, which favors conceding nothing to Germany.

While official circles described the Anglo-French proposals for a generous compromise as fitting the Czech government's plans for a new minority statute, the "man in the street" definitely was disappointed. General public opinion is that Britain and France are over-eager to cede too much to Sudeten demands.

A United Press canvass of shopkeepers, laborers, domestics and white-collar workers revealed a great majority of the Czech people generally fear further concessions will result in the eventual separation of the Sudeten territory from Czechoslovakia. They were almost unanimous in believing that if the next step is granting of autonomy—then Konrad Henlein's Germans will vote to become part of the German Reich.

Zech Youths Pledge Unity.

Plague, May 8 (U.P.).—Thousands of boys and girls of Czechoslovakia's Sudeten German Youth Organization, meeting at Aussig, today proclaimed their unity with the Third Reich's Hitler Youth Movement and demanded a right to premilitary education.

Konrad Henlein, Sudeten Nazi leader, sent a telegram of greeting, saying, "I trust in the victory of our youth as I trust in a victory of the Sudeten Germans."

Hitler

hand in Czechoslovakia, so far as Italy is concerned, and in return promised to respect Italian interests in the Danubian and Balkin regions.

While the contents of their bargain gradually were being disclosed, some members of the German delegates decribed Hitler's guarantee of the frontier between Germany and Italy as "a colossal sacrifice."

Assurances "Far-Reaching."

This renunciation of the south Tyrol—where many Germans live and which Italy got as part of the World War settlement—the Germans said they could explain only on the ground that Mussolini's reported assurances of a free hand for Hitler in Czechoslovakia must have been far-reaching.

"I only hope there won't be many suicides in south Tyrol," one observed. "The propaganda since anschluss (Union of Austria and Germany effected March 13) has been terrific among the Italian Tyrolese, much against the wishes of the German government.

"These families of German tongue and blood fully expected Mussolini would make a friendly gesture permitting them to rejoin greater Germany."

Mussolini's cherished four-power pact plan (among Italy, Germany, Great Britain and France) apparently has been dropped in favor of the sphere of influence scheme.

The regrouping of forces was expected to involve Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania.

Military Pact Expected.

Moscow, May 8 (U.P.).—Soviet officials tonight said they expected a formal military alliance between Germany and Italy to result from Dictator Hitler's visit to Rome as the answer to the new defense agreement entered into by Britain and France.

The prediction was made by Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party, simultaneously with an announcement that wreckers and Fascist spies had disrupted the Soviet's chemical industry in order to hamper defense measures.

Visit Called Failure.

Paris, May 8 (U.P.).—French diplomats, convinced Dicator Hitler went to Rome for the main purpose of drawing Premier Mussolini into his pan-German activities on the Continent, tonight felt the Nazi's visit had been a failure.

Foreign Minister Bonnet, who left tonight for Geneva to attend tomorrow's League Council meeting, was understood to have agreed with Premier Daladier that the meeting of the two dictators has raised no new menace to European peace.

Nor has it rolled any new stumbling blocks in the way of the pending talks on an Italo-French treaty of friendship, it was maintained.

Italian Warns Pope.

Milan, May 8 (U.P.).—Premier Benito Mussolini's newspaper Popolo D'Italia today contained an article signed by "Utinam" warning the Pope not to use the Cross as a political weapon.

The article obviously was meant as a retort to the Pope's speech last Wednesday in which he deplored display of the swastika on a feast day on the occasion of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's visit.

Capt. F. H. Post told her, however, the police had no reason to detain the squire.

'Hostile' Fleet Crossing Ocean To 'Attack' U.S.

Army Air Corps Prepares to Spy Out 'Foe' in Elaborate Maneuvers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—A fleet of hostile war vessels, intent on attacking the northeastern part of the United States (so the Army's war game announcement reads), was steaming westward across the Atlantic tonight.

The exact location and objectives of the enemy, which (adds the announcement) is a combination of European and Asiatic powers, were unknown, but the fleet is due late in the week, and it looked as though the Nation's armed forces of the air would make a reconnaissance over the Atlantic Thursday.

In any event, for the most elaborate maneuvers the Army Air Corps ever has staged, pursuit and bombardment squadrons for three days prior to Thursday's "zero hour" will do practice problems in interception.

The idea is to destroy or cripple the enemy before he has an opportunity to loose dozens of bombing aircraft upon the industrial cities of the Northeast.

Plymouth Awakes To Find Old Rock Painted Red Again

Plymouth, Mass., May 8 (AP).—A shocked Plymouth citizenry awoke today and found the famous rock—on which the Pilgrims reputedly first set foot in the new world settlement—covered to its base with bright red paint.

Town officials called out police to track down the vandals, and workmen to begin immediately the task of removing the brilliant hue.

A year and a week ago, red paint was found on the rock, and was blamed first on Communists who were celebrating May Day. Philip Frankfeld, secretary of the Communist party in Massachusetts, denied members of his party were guilty. The vandals of May 1, 1937, never were caught.

Archer Denies Any Scandal in His $2,000 Fee

Attorney Says He Based His Charge on Total Cost of Projects.

A $2,000 fee based on total cost of Harford County WPA projects for 1936 was paid him by the county for over two years' service as county counsel, Robert Archer, of Bel Air, Md., said last night.

Archer, a member of Senator Millard Tydings' Maryland law firm, denied recent insinuations by Drew Pearson, Washington columnist, that any scandal was involved in the fact that he was paid for legal services to the county.

"The author of the article is the son of a Governor of the Virgin Islands who was removed while Senator Tydings was chairman of the Committee on Territories," he observed. Leonard Lyon, New York columnist for The Post, had predicted several days ago that such a charge would be made.

Archer stated that he understood from the county commissioners that a certain percentage of the total expenditure on WPA projects was allowed for legal services. He declared he had based his bill on 1 per cent of the 1938 WPA expenditures of nearly $300,000, but had agreed to accept $2,000. He emphasized that he had had no argument with the commissioners over the fee.

"I was substituting for Charles McNabb, county counsel, who was ill," Archer declared. "I didn't charge the county for routine matters, but based my bill entirely on the WPA expenditures, a large proportion of which was borne not by the Federal Government but by the county."

"I devoted continuous attention to the work for two and a half years," Archer said. "I had to check with the engineers, see that there were no overcharges, check prices of materials, and so forth. And there was plenty of other, more routine work, which I performed entirely gratis."

Tuberculosis Rise Is Feared In Montgomery

Dr. Cullen Warns Slash of Funds May Increase Death Rate.

Maryland's progress in reducing the tuberculosis death rate is threatened by a $75,000 cut in the budget for upkeep of State sanitoria, Dr. Victor F. Cullen, superintendent of State sanitoria, told the Montgomery County branch of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association at its annual meeting at Norbeck, Md. If the slash is continued, he said, the State's tuberculosis institutions face drastic curtailment.

Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, announced he is planning an extensive anti-tuberculosis program in the county high schools.

Mrs. Frank F. Zundel, of Takoma Park, was re-elected president. Other officers elected were Dr. J. W. Bird, Dr. U. D. Nourse and Miss Estelle Moore, vice presidents; Mrs. Daxter Bullard, secretary; O. W. Roby, treasurer, and Mrs. William Dahl, seal sale chairman. Mrs. Edward Haas is chairman of the receiving committee for the seal sale.

W. B. Matthews, State managing director of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, said Montgomery County led the State in the last seal sale. The county, he said, raised $5,268.72.

Residents of the Four Corners community, who recently organized a citizens' association, are undertaking a campaign to help the Trageser family. The family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Trageser and their seven children, were left homeless two weeks ago when their new home near Wheaton, which Trageser had built, was destroyed by fire. A petition for funds is to be circulated immediately in the neighborhood and a garden party will be held shortly to raise additional funds. In addition the citizens plan to offer their services to Dr. Trageser in rebuilding his home. The association has adopted as its temporary name the Northwest Citizens Association of Montgomery County.

U. S. Businessmen Swamp RFC for $55,000,000 Loans

Businessmen are swamping the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with applications for part of the $1,500,000,000 it has available for business lending.

The agency has lent $20,400,000 in the 2½ months since the President authorized it to resume lending, and $55,000,000 worth of additional applications have been forwarded to Washington. Both small and big business have borrowed.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones is urging banks to handle as many of the loan applications as possible, on the theory that the Government purse should be the last resort for commercial financing.

The 12 Federal Reserve banks, which make industrial loans to businessmen when commercial bank credit is not available, had $9,000,000 of new applications between February 23 and April 20 and approved about $4,000,000.

Fire Destroys Store Building At Baltimore

Second Structure Swept by Flames; Traffic Delayed Hours.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 8. — Firemen worked in relays in dense clouds of smoke for hours early today before checking a department store blaze in the business district.

The smoke was so thick firemen were not able to remain in it for long, relays handling the hoses.

The blaze, originating in Green's department store on Lexington street in the city's movie district, swept that store and spread to two adjoining buildings before it was brought under control. The roof of an adjoining shoe store collapsed into the building.

At that time, firemen who had scaled the relatively small Green building were ordered down for fear it would fall, but the walls held throughout.

Several firemen were overcome by smoke and Howard Ginnevan, a Salvage Corps member, suffered a possible fracture of the leg when he fell from a ladder.

Traffic was blocked for a wide area and all spectators were kept hundreds of yards away for fear of explosions.

Faith Declared In Democracy By B'nai B'rith

Jewish Order, Opening Its Convention Here, Opposes Communism.

A declaration of faith in democracy and opposition to communism yesterday opened the general convention of B'nai B'rith, meeting at the Willard Hotel.

"In democracy alone," declared President Alfred M. Cohen in his convention address, "is the hope of Jews and others who are the playthings of autocracy. We who know this well should be foremost among those who stand embattled in defense of the institutions of democracy in this country."

Cohen, who retires from the presidency this week after 13 years of service, emphatically refuted the contention that there are many Jews in the Communist movement.

"Only those who do not know the Jews, their economic position, their general point of view, their religious history—only those who are warped by prejudice and therefore desire to entertain illusions, can believe that the Jews are, in considerable part, in sympathy with communism," he declared.

Summing up the activities of the international fraternal order since he became president in 1925, Cohen said the organization had spent nearly $2,000,000 on welfare and relief work. Its membership has increased one-third since that year, and branches have been established in 10 additional foreign countries.

Cohen announced B'nai B'rith's intention of continuing its co-operation in the world-wide effort to find refuges for German and Austrian emigrees. He praised Secretary Hull, who he said has given "every assistance that was possible within the limitations of diplomatic usage."

Yesterday afternoon a service was held at Arlington National Cemetery, where Cohen placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Tonight nearly 1,000 delegates and guests will attend a banquet, at which Speaker of the House William B. Bankhead will address the convention.

Farm

the crop to be planted this fall and next spring, growers have an option of complying with or rejecting the allotments. However, only those who comply will be eligible for maximum benefit payments and wheat loans.

Mr. Farrell disclosed that, looking to the allotments to be made in July, the AAA was conducting a series of meetings with farmers throughout the wheat belt, obtaining information from them on their acreage needs, and seeking to prevent in the wheat section a repetition of the wave of dissatisfaction that followed announcement of allotments to corn, cotton and tobacco raisers.

He minimized the likelihood of such a "revolt" in the Nation's "bread-basket."

"They are pretty intelligent fellows," he said, "and they can see it is a question of a large crop with small prices or a smaller crop at more favorable prices."

Little Doubt of Loans.

Farrell told The Post there was little doubt that wheat loans would have to be made this year. Only a major crop disaster, apparently, could remove the necessity. The law provides that when the crop goes above the normal consumption of the country, or the price drops below 52 per cent of the parity price, fixed at $1.15 a bushel, the loans shall be made under the direction of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The loans, designed to prevent disastrous slumps in wheat prices, may be fixed to return the grower from 52 to 75 per cent of the parity price.

While officials would not guess at the wheat estimate to be published by the crop reporting board tomorrow, it was indicated they were prepared for a forecast of from 750,000,000 to 760,000,000 bushels of winter wheat and 200,000,000 in the spring-planted crop.

Wallace Conducts Drive.

In addition to acreage-reduction and wheat loan projects, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is directing an intensive campaign to put the new wheat insurance program into effect. The program is expected to take 50,000,000 bushels from the market, by farmers paying their insurance premiums in grain, as the law permits.

Insurance is provided against drought, rust, insect damage and other "natural causes" up to 75 per cent of a farmer's normal yield. Rates run from one-half to two bushels an acre, dependent on the risk in each section, as shown in previous years.

Wheat paid as premiums will be stored for indemnity payments in years of lean crops to insured farmers.

Frost in Wheat Belt.

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—The Government Weather Bureau tonight reported frost occurred in parts of the Nation's wheat belt last night.

Meteorologist C. A. Donnel said frost or freezing temperatures were reported in Kansas, the Texas Panhandle, Nebraska, North and South Dakota and Minnesota.

"Our present reports do not indicate how severe the frost was or whether there was any damage," Donnel said.

such line of reasoning, the Journal article says: "In the last analysis, the solution lies not in the decrees of judges in overcoming the stubborn intolerance of organized medicine. The recent revolt of a group of influential dissenters within the ranks of the American Medical Association indicates that perhaps the change may be accomplished with a minimum of outside interference.

House Inquiry Backed.

"Failing this, the most effective alternative is to secure passage in the House of Representatives of a pending resolution authorizing a Congressional investigation of the Association."

The feud between the Group Health Association and the allied forces of the District Medical Society and local hospitals reached its peak recently when one member of the association's clinic staff was expelled from the society and two members of the G. H. A. staff resigned.

Inquiry Pending.

Dr. Mario Scandiffio, a member of the GHA's clinic staff, was expelled from the society March 16 by a majority vote for violating "certain rules of the society."

Resignation of Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, medical director of the GHA, April 13, was followed closely by that of Dr. Stephen Hulburt, a member of the staff. The same day Hulburt resigned, Representative Paul A. Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, introduced a resolution to direct the Attorney General to take legal action to recover $40,000 the HOLC granted to get the Federal workers' health clinic started.

Shafer also asked Speaker Bankhead to appoint a committee of seven Representatives to conduct a thorough inquiry into GHA.

Congress

His wage-hour bill then had just been pigeon-holed by the House Rules Committee, voting 8 to 6, and there was in progress a furor of criticism for his $4,500,000,000 spending-lending recovery program.

As he returns, the wage-hour measure has been taken away from the Rules Committee by a majority of the House membership, its passage in that chamber is conceded, and talk of a filibuster against it in the Senate has all but disappeared.

In addition, the Florida Democratic primary has returned Claude Pepper, New Deal supporter to the Senate, and the recovery program has progressed to the point where it will reach the House tomorrow with only 10 hours of debate to be permitted before certain passage.

How much other legislation the President will insist on at this session may be made known after his talk with Hill leaders today. It is conceded that he is in a better position now than before the Florida primary to put through whatever portions of his program he feels inclined to call for, but the adjournment urge is strong at the Capitol, with members eager to get home for their campaigning.

High on the list of measures to be put through is that conference agreement on the tax bill, whose chief changes in existing law are modifications of the undistributed profits and capital gains levies.

Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, is expected to call up the report in the Senate today or tomorrow.

Meanwhile the National Association of Manufacturers, contending the present Federal, State and local tax structure is a tremendous burden on the national economy, asked Congress to inaugurate a study aimed at its simplification.

"Much can be done to simplify and co-ordinate our system of taxation," said a statement by the association's board of directors, transmitted to Congress by Charles R. Hook, association president.

"There are today more than 175,000 taxing units in the United States and taxation experts believe this number could be reduced nearly 90 per cent . . . So severe has become the system that the law of diminishing returns has begun to operate in many fields."

Prospects of adjournment by June 1 diminished yesterday, in view of the fact that the wage-hour bill cannot reach the House floor, under the rules, until May 23. After House action, considerable opposition in the Senate would not be surprising, despite practical abandonment of talk of a filibuster in that chamber.

Earlier House action on the bill might be possible, it was pointed out, if the Rules Committee should reverse its action and give the bill right of way, following the successful petition campaign. Committee members, however, were quoted as saying there was no likelihood of such reversal.

President Roosevelt has called, also, in his antitrust message, for immediate controls over bank holding companies, as well as an exhaustive investigatoin of monopolies and legislative needs to curb them.

Other legislation held urgent for this session consists of measures intended to grant partial relief to the financiallypressed railroad industry.

A debate on the President's recovery program was conducted over the Mutual Broadcasting System last night by Bernarr MacFadden, magazine publisher, and Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington.

MacFedden declared "pump-priming had proved a colossal failure as a business promotion plan, adding that "of all the foolish experiments conducted by the present Administration, pump-priming is about the worst."

Schwellenbach replied that earlier pump-priming had not failed. "From the time it was started," he said, "until it was too abruptly curtailed last summer, business conditions improved."

New slip covers will do a lot to pep up your spirits ... and freshen your home. Many shops are offering special bargain prices to keep their work rooms busy, so plan to take advantage of this opportunity.

If you have plain linen slip covers, take your courage in both hands. Make some smart new printed linen or chintz pillows. I saw some the other day with a piping of solid color. Also an oblong pillow of the plain color. Be certain to buy a chintz with a tag put on the material by the manufacturer guaranteeing the material to be sun fast and shrink proof. It safeguards your purchase.

Two Wage-Fixing Techniques.

There is nothing surprising about the rush of Congressmen to sign the petition breaking the grip of the House Rules Committee on the wages-and-hours bill and permitting a vote on that measure at the present session. No doubt most of the signing legislators were eager to protest against sweatshop wages, doubly eager because of the approaching elections. Between admirable protests of this sort and the enactment of practical legislation, however, there remains a wide gulf to be bridged.

Some members who insist that the bill must be amended to make it acceptable nevertheless joined in the move to dislodge it from the Rules Committee. If these legislators fail to secure wage differentials between the North and South, they will probably vote against the measure. Should they succeed in amending it, a considerable block of Northern Congressmen will be likely to turn against the bill. In any event, fundamental differences between the House and Senate bills will have to be ironed out before legislation can be enacted.

The House is once more faced by an old dilemma. It is easy to advance the principle of a floor for wages and a ceiling for hours. But it is very difficult to implement that aim with Federal law. In their rush to achieve a worthy objective the sponsors of this bill would lay down uniform minimum rates of pay and maximum hours of work for the entire country. Even in the single city of Washington, however, the need for rather wide differentials has been clearly recognized.

During the ten months in which it has been in operation the District minimum wage board has approved wage "floors" for three major groups of women workers. Each industry has been thoroughly studied by representatives of the employes and employers, as well as by the board, and minimum wages have been carefully adjusted in accord with personal expenditures essential to decent living. This technique has resulted in minimum wage rates ranging from $17 for retail clerks to $14.50 for hotel maids and laundry workers.

The board clearly recognized that the cost of living in Washington is high in comparison to most other parts of the country. Yet some of the minimum wages it has fixed are substantially below the $16 per week base contemplated by the House bill for "industries affecting commerce." In the light of the scientific approach of the local board, it is impossible to escape the conclusion that the proposed national minimum wage would be more than adequate in some cases and quite inadequate in others.

The forceful arguments that are being made against sweat-shop wages do not justify bungling efforts to set up national standards that in themselves might prove inequitable and discriminatory.

Fair Distribution.

Approval of the Cartwright bill by the House ought to mean something more than $700,000 per year in the form of Federal aid for District highways. That addition to the local budget will, of course, be gratefully received by the local community. Much more significant, however, is the principle of equal distribution of these Federal funds which both the House and Senate have now accepted.

The practice of prorating Federal money for public improvements among the several States and denying any portion of it to the District cannot be reasonably defended. No State would tolerate such discrimination. Fortunately Congress now agrees that such treatment should no longer be accorded the politically impotent District. If that rule is consistently applied, it will ease a good deal of the friction between the national and local governments.

As recently pointed out by Maj. Donovan, the District auditor, Washington has never been granted the same favorable terms given other cities in obtaining funds from the PWA. If another spending program is to be launched, with loans and grants from the PWA, Washington should certainly be put on an equal footing with other cities. Amendment of the local statute so as to permit equitable distribution of any public works fund that may be voted should be an integral part of the spending legislation, whether it is approved or defeated.

Like consideration ought to be given to the Alley Dwelling Authority which is urgently in need of funds to carry on its attack upon Washington's hidden slums. President Roosevelt has asked for an additional $300,000,000 to speed up the work of slum clearance. That proposal has aroused apprehension that the slums may be neglected while cities rush to spend money for new housing on vacant land. In the District no such departure from the objective of reclaiming blighted areas would be possible under the law. Yet the ADA is struggling along with only a fraction of the funds made available to other cities of comparable size.

Clearly the sound principle of the Cartwright bill should be applied in the case of other District agencies.

They Protest Too Much.

Whether or not Hitler's spectacular visit to Rome last week actually set "a seal on the understanding" between Germany and Italy, as Mussolini has informed the world, subsequent developments alone can show.

In the present highly fluid state of international relations professions of eternal friendship are subject to considerable discount. That is certainly true of those made with such fervor by Fuehrer and Duce at their love feast last Saturday. Neither has hesitated in the past to treat solemn pledges as scraps of paper whenever they stood in the way of what has been deemed the national interest. There is not the slightest reason to believe that either will refrain from acting in the same cynical manner in the future if there is any advantage to be gained thereby. And both dictators know it.

Indeed, Hitler let the cat out of the bag when he publicly informed Mussolini that Germany would "consider inviolate for all time the frontiers of the Alps erected between us by nature." In other words, the Fuehrer felt it necessary to give assurances to his ally that Germany has no intention of stabbing Italy in the back. This was both an admission that he recognizes that Italy has felt her security threatened by the extension of the Third Reich's frontiers to the Brenner and an indirect threat that unless Rome pursues a policy satisfactory to Berlin the promise now made will be rescinded.

Certainly both Hitler and Mussolini are well aware that an equally solemn pledge made by the Fuehrer in 1936 to respect Austria's independence and sovereignty was completely disregarded by him less than two years later.

However, the fact cannot be ignored that for all the imponderable barrier of suspicion that arose between the partners of the Berlin-Rome axis when Austria disappeared, that axis still stands. For varying reasons both Germany and Italy continue to find it to their advantage to preserve for a while longer at least the facade of unity between them. Hitler needs Mussolini's co-operation to prevent the Third Reich's diplomatic isolation. And Italy, for her part, sees in the continuation of the link with Berlin, at a time when friendly relations with Great Britain have been restored and a rapprochement with France is on the way, a chance to occupy a pivotal position in European diplomacy.

There are, to be sure, overtones in the speeches made by Hitler and Mussolini at Saturday's banquet in Rome which suggest that the two Fascist powers are planning to undertake a far-reaching policy of collaboration. Thus Hitler spoke of the "clear separation of the respective spheres of life of the two nations" that will "build a bridge for mutual assistance and co-operation." He also cited the determination of the two powers "to resist with all their might any forces that may set themselves in opposition to their natural development." Mussolini, for his part, did not go so far. But he did emphasize the "parallelism" of German and Italian policies and the "solidarity" of their interests and outlook.

These banquet phrases are vague enough to mean anything—or nothing. Their present significance lies in the fact that they are intended to suggest a unity of aim and outlook between the Fascist powers designed to impress the rest of the world and thus make the other nations more amenable to German and Italian pressures. The blackmailing potentialities of the Berlin-Rome axis have been amply demonstrated in the past. The Rome speeches indicate that Fuehrer and Duce believe that it continues to have its uses as a club over the heads of Great Britain and France.

36th In '37; 19th In '38.

By happy coincidence, on the day of the national school patrol parade here, a 47 per cent reduction in traffic fatalities was announced as Washington's achievement for the first three months of the year. The local boys and girls who serve as traffic monitors evidently have nothing to fear by contrast with those from other parts of the country.

This is not to suggest that the local patrols are necessarily more efficient than the rest, for an improvement in traffic safety is reported for the country at large. According to experts, children by their work at street crossings, and even more by their educational influence, deserve a full share of applause in all safety gains.

There have been many other factors at work. One of particular importance is the interstate drive to standardize traffic codes and practices. Another factor, which is less of a net gain, is this year's appreciable reduction in national automobile registrations and a roughly corresponding decline in gasoline consumption.

Washington has seen an increase in gasolines sales, although it, too, has experienced a drop in automobiles registered—10 per cent is the figure. This seeming paradox is probably explained by the steadily increasing number of visitors to Washington. In the final analysis, however, one point is outstanding. Washingtonians are driving more carefully. This is evidenced by the decline in traffic arrests reported by the police.

It is believed that three principal factors are responsible. First is the policy of revoking the licenses of reckless drivers. Second is the law which cancels the permits of those unable to establish financial responsibility following an accident. Third are the daily broadcasts of proceedings in the District Traffic Court.

For these and other devices by which the menace of the automobile is being gradually restrained, Washington has its traffic director to thank. Doubtless Mr. Van Duzer would disclaim the credit, protesting that the people have only themselves to thank. He would be right, too, but he would be overlooking the importance of vigorous and intelligent leadership.

Functions Of A Bank.

Delegates attending the annual convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce last week were warned by Jesse R. Jones, RFC chairman, that banking must meet the credit needs of the country if it is to remain in private hands. He cited the existence of a great number of credit and finance companies, public and private, to support his opinion that "banks generally have not been particularly wise or energetic in meeting the credit needs of the country."

No doubt some banks have been unduly fearful and reluctant to take legitimate credit risks in recent years. That is not surprising in view of the catastrophic experiences of the depression, with its abundant harvest of bank failures. Moreover, bankers, like other men, are products of training and environment. And most of them have been taught that short-term, self-liquidating commercial loans are the ideal type of assets for a commercial bank to hold.

Then, too, bankers who place their funds in slow assets often find themselves in difficulties with national or State bank examiners. Indeed, Mr. Jones himself admits that the attitude of the supervisory authorities has discouraged the banks from venturing to make loans of longer maturities and of different character.

This natural tendency to overcaution on the part both of bank managements and examining agencies is not the only reason for the slow response of the banks to changing credit requirements. They are also restricted by laws governing the types of loans and investments which they may make. The recent liberalization of Federal banking laws to make it easier for the banks to meet long-time credits demands could not be expected to work a sudden change in established practices.

In a very instructive address to the Chamber of Commerce convention Edward E. Brown, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, points out that a few years ago practically all bankers and supervising authorities regarded capital loans or any relatively long-term loans as unsuitable investments for banks of deposit. This attitude, as he says, "is still held by many, perhaps the majority of all bankers, and by a considerable portion of the supervising authorities."

It is a debatable question whether this narrow traditional concept of the proper scope of commercial banking is reactionary and non-progressive, as Mr. Jones believes. At any rate, it is easy to understand why many bankers hold such views.

It is still a question how far commercial banks should attempt to meet new and varied credit needs instead of leaving such tasks to specialized credit agencies. It has also to be kept in mind that the strong pressure upon the banks to provide direct capital loans running for a considerable time is in part due to the prostration of the market for new capital issues. And for that the Administration is largely responsible. Concerns which normally would have sold their securities to the investing public have in many cases been forced to turn for relief to the banks.

Obviously the banks, with a huge volume of excess reserves, are anxious to find profitable employment for their resources and to assist an expansion of industry. Many are experimenting with new types of loans and discussing the need for a reformulation of lending policies to meet changed conditions. Such an open-minded examination of present-day banking problems is most essential. But the banks would be doing themselves and their communities serious harm if, in their eagerness to exploit new lending opportunities, they were to sacrifice their liquidity and solvency.

"The eyes, ears and throat are sympathetically connected," asserts a physician. This probably explains why so many things we see and hear give us a pain in the neck.

We're glad we don't live in Russia, where we'd be likely to be flushed out of bed and shot at sunrise. A thing like that would spoil our whole day.

Old Story.

The menace of the Roosevelt campaign does not lie in the third term tradition, but in the state of mind that could desire four years more of Roosevelt in the White House, four years more of personal government, four years more of Presidential lawlessness, four years more of autocratic rule, four years more of executive contempt for Congress, courts and Constitution, four years more of centralization, four more years of wanton extravagance, four years more of denunciation and demagogy—in the state of mind that wants the new national aims, that wants a Federal interference with every form of human industry and activity, that wants the States stripped of their powers, that wants the minority and bureaucracy substituted for the bill of rights. The danger does not lie in popular indifference to the third term tradition, but in popular indifference to the fundamental principles of liberty upon which the Republic was established.

Viewpoints On Press Control

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Permit me to protest vehemently against your editorial, "To Undermine The Press," in your issue of April 30, with its characteristic misrepresentation of Senator Minton's speech in the Senate the preceding Thursday.

The speech contained two things—first, a denunciation of the reactionary press for its flagrant distortion of political news; and second, a proposal to punish newspapers for knowingly publishing false news. Instead of discussing each issue on its merits, you conjure up the specter of Hitlerism, on the silly reasoning that since Hitler falsely accuses the foreign press of printing lies about Nazism and has completely muzzled the press in his own country, therefore any criticism of the American press, and any proposal for punishing the publication of deliberate falsehoods that can be proved as such in a court of law constitute an attempt to introduce Hitlerism in this country.

On this logic we must not criticize anybody or anything because some crook or tyrant has already misused that type of criticism. On the same logic, too, since Hitler used a trumped-up charge of the Communists burning the Reichstag in order to consolidate his dictatorship, we ought to abolish the crime of arson from the statute books lest it be used for the same purpose in this country. And because Stalin frames his political opponents with false accusations of poisoning, sabotage and treason, we ought to abolish the crimes of poisoning, sabotage and treason!

Of course in conjuring up the menace of a dictatorial government control of the American press, The Post obviously seeks to distract attention from the fact that the American press is almost entirely controlled by reactionary political and economic interests. This does not yet amount to a dictatorship. Voices can still be raised in criticism and protest, and proposals can be made in Congress to punish newspapers for telling deliberate lies. The reactionary newspapers, however, take the position that they are above criticism. They wish to consolidate themselves into a more effective dictatorship. Unable as yet to prevent criticism of the press—which is still not lese majeste in this country—they misrepresent all criticism, including Senator Minton's.

Please inform your readers that you still have the time honored privilege of misrepresenting anything and everything, and that Senator Minton does not propose to take it away from you. He exercises the right of free speech in criticizing the American press and in pointing out its misrepresentations of important issues. And he proposes to punish the newspaper business for what in any other business is punishable both by common law and by statutory enactment.

Why is The Post opposed to a law which would punish deliberate and provable falsehood? Is it because The Post wants the privilege of continuing to indulge in the common newspaper practice of printing falsehoods? I have two instances of newspaper falsehood, with signed confessions from the editor in my pocket. One of these instances concerns The Post.

I do not wish to exaggerate the importance of date-line falsehood in news, though in this instance it was the crux of the falsehood. The case merely illustrates the fact that newspaper publishers are not exempt from the same temptations which beset other businessmen. It is recognized that misrepresentations and adulterations of other goods must be subject to legal checks in the interests of the public. News also is a kind of salable goods which is evidently in need of the same protection as wine, milk, and stocks and bonds. Newspaper publishers who wish to be honest should welcome legal restraint of unscrupulous competitors.

I myself am inclined to think that provable and punishable falsehoods in the press are of less social importance than the vicious misrepresentation of important political issues. But misrepresentation cannot be directly attacked by legal prosecution. It can be attacked only by publicity. The chief value, in my opinion, of a law making newspaper publishers responsible for criminal falsehoods would be in serving notice to them that they are not above the law. It would be a wholesome check to their overweening ambition for a Hitlerian dictatorship of their own. BENJAMIN GINZBURG.

Washington, May 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you permit a foreigner who thinks the Nazi program is good for Germany to write a letter on your editorial named "To Undermine The Press?" I wish to do this because in that editorial you said state control of the press in Germany is an argument against Senator Minton's bill for similar control in the United States of America. I think I can show how you are wrong.

The careful and sympathetic control of German newspapers by the government is only used in the assistance of truth which must also be what Senator Minton wants in the United States of America. Perhaps you do not know that when Communists set fire to the German Reichstag, as later proved in court, there were even German papers which suggested this Red outrage was the work of members of the Nazi party. No government should permit such dirty slanders to be printed for innocent readers who might actually believe lies just because of the printing.

The United States of America is a fortunate land. Outside of New York I hear you have no Communists worth the counting. You have a few Red newspapers but I am told very few people who are not Reds ever see them. But it might happen that you will not be always so fortunate. With depressions you could get more Reds and they might spread Red newspapers for uneducated readers. Then these lies could not so easily be ignored. Then you would have to command truth in your newspapers by law, as Hitler has done.

I do not really understand why you are excited against the suggestion of Senator Minton. If I understand he only wants to keep falsehoods out of the newspapers. Your well-circulated papers are not Communist so do not print lies unless by mistake or ignorance. But with Communist papers it is a matter of policy to say what Moscow wants to say. That is why there were such lies in German newspapers until they were controlled. It must be to prevent such lies here that Senator Minton makes his proposal. Such a law would surely not be directed against a paper like The Post.

I think it is a fine paper you have except on matters about which you can be excused for not knowing. You do not seem to know about the Reds in Spain and clearly you do not know of the great regeneration in Germany. If Senator Minton's bill was law it would stop the lies about Germany which are now spread by Red propaganda. But I do not blame you for this because the Reds are clever in making misrepresentations.

If Americans consider this subject I do not think they will oppose a patriotic law which must be intended only to punish untruths which are meant to be that. And, if you will pardon me, I may remind that you must not attack Germany for not having an opposition press because there is no longer any real opposition to have a newspaper. All the German elections since Hitler are showing how true that is. K. B.

Washington, May 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently there has been considerable discussion in Congress and elsewhere of the press and its presentation of the news (of course, on the editorial page this is expected and, perhaps, proper). The press, naturally, has defended itself against such charges as so aptly illustrated by your editorial notations in your news account of Senator Minton's charges. Therefore I should like to call your attention to the inclosed clipping from The Post of May 2. Please note that opposition to the spending program is mentioned first in the headlines and is given first place in the write-up. Also note that Gifford (opposition) receives about two-thirds of the space to Rayburn's (support) one-third.

A few days ago The Post reported a debate between Taber (I believe) and a supporter of the New Deal. Here again the same methods of presentation were used. Again, when the Supreme Court handed down rulings for and against (as interpreted) the New Deal the headlines presented the opposition to the New Deal and relegated to a subordinate position the favorable decision. Incidentally, I have not seen in The Post (although it may have been there) Secretary Wallace's explanation of the order under consideration and statement that the inequity was corrected some time ago, so as to conform to the present ruling. I was pleased to find in the editorial of May 2 a satisfactory reference to this.

It seems to me that these three examples represent propaganda in the news columns rather than the relative importance (regardless of their actual news value) given to items for or against the New Deal.

Let me assure you that I am writing you from the standpoint of the value and power of the press and not as a defender or critic of the New Deal. The press must retain the confidence of the people if it is to continue to hold a position as a powerful molder of public opinion in the real interest of the people. I think you will agree that anything that destroys the confidence of the people in the integrity of the news columns will largely destroy this influence. I concede that I may be wrong in reading propagandist influence in the three examples I cited. Perhaps other factors made this apparent coloring necessary. F. W. M.

Washington, May 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I received your note attaching the letter from a gentleman who complained that one Congressional speaker received twice the number of lines another was given and suggesting that The Post might, therefore, be guilty of propaganda in its news columns.

An amazing number of citizens have recently discovered the word "propaganda," including Senator Sherman Minton, and are having a grand time using it. May I have a little of your space to put in my nickel's worth on the subject?

I wonder if it has occurred to the novitiates on this subject that almost everything that is printed or uttered is propaganda for something or other. The word propaganda means any organized or concerted group or movement to spread a particular doctrine or principle. Nowadays its connotation is mostly a secret or clandestine dissemination of ideas, information, gossip or the like, for the purpose of helping or hurting a person, a cause, a group, a party or a people.

Thus, if you and I set out some morning to pass the word around that it is a beautiful spring day we could easily be accused of using propaganda against the weather man who said plainly, in print, that it was going to rain. If I publish a church notice I am a propagandist of Christianity. If I publish a picture of sweet girl graduates I am a subtle propagandist for higher education. If Mrs. Roosevelt, bless her, sets out in the morning to visit children in a hospital and gets her name and picture in the newspaper by so doing, some bigot can label that propaganda for her husband.

There is no end to it. Some propaganda is truth. Some propaganda is malice. And, politically speaking, every word uttered in Congress is propaganda for some cause or idea. And all any honest, conscientious editor can hope to do is to winnow out the chaff and print the truth in so far as he knows the truth.

As for those babes-in-arms who would like to see only one side of any argument printed, let me say that when that happens in the United States, they will be goose-stepping down Pennsylvania avenue, reading only what they are told to read, thinking only what they are allowed to think, and taking their castor oil in large doses, whether they like it or not.

It is well to remember that the Constitution of the United States was the result of very clever propaganda—the Federalist papers, written by gentlemen named Hamilton, Jay and Madison, and printed in the newspapers of the day to sell the ideas on the subject to the citizens of this country. And as I close, I glance at my wastebasket—filled to overflowing with propaganda on every subject under the sun.

The Post Impressionist

Sunbaked Gingerbread.

ALICE latched the gray board door in the high wooden fence and went tapping along over the raised board walk toward her husband's office and laboratory. She always felt as though she shut out the ordinary world of noises, automobiles, people, confusion when she shut the gate. The high fence was topped with several strands of barbed wire to keep out venturesome boys. And the gate had a lock.

"Only the birds and bees may come and go at will in here," she thought. "Peace has to have a fence around it."

She paused, looking down at the masses of violets in bloom at her feet. She always picked a large bunch of them every spring even though it was Government property.

"No one really owns you," she said to them, "you spread where you will."

Overhanging the walk was the large honey locust, the largest one in town Alice thought. Its dark, heavy branches looked too solid to put forth such tender green leaves and fragile clusters of creamy, pea-like flowers. But it was as though a colossal black hand was reaching up through the earth to hold in its fingers the large bouquet. Bees were busy and jealous of their sweet harvest. Alice took off her hat and looked up into the top of the tree, breathing deeply in the warm, sweet air.

A little beyond the tree was a raised platform for taking solar observations. Three people were standing on the platform so Alice went over to greet them. Dr. A., the chief, was smiling in a pleased way, holding in his hand a small pan.

"You are a good cook," he said to Alice, "come taste my gingerbread."

"Did you just make it?"

"Yes, this is the second one I have made this morning."

He broke off a corner and passed it to Alice. She began to eat it, and he passed around more pieces to the others.

"It tastes like more. Did you bake it out here in the sun in that solar cooker?"

"Yes."

"This certainly is an improvement over that large cooker you used to use at Mount Vernon," Alice remarked. "Why, this is almost apartment size . . . no bigger than a lady's overnight bag."

She looked in wonder at the shiny metal box standing in the bright sunlight.

"Why, I did not know you could bake things by sunlight in this climate. I thought it could only be used in Arizona, or California, or such places."

"Well, here is proof of it!"

"My, it smells good. And just imagine the distance that heat had to come through space in order to cook it."

"Ninety-three million miles," said he.

"One million sounds about as far as ninety-three for I can't visualize either. I suppose it took it about a year to come all that distance?"

"No; only eight minutes."

Alice stopped eating and looked at the gingerbread. The same heat that she felt on her face in the sunlight had cooked the gingerbread. It didn't seem possible. This tall, lanky man with the slow smile had built a box to trap the heat. And now he was cooking by sunlight. Why, anything was possible in the future with such minds at work! Alice thought of Jules Verne and the more recent Buck Rogers. Perhaps they were not so impossible after all.

"I suppose we'll all be using little portable sun stoves in our backyards soon," Alice laughed. "But the gas and electric companies will howl."

"I guess you forgot about the rainy days and cloudy days," someone offered.

"Oh, the first thing you know, there will be a way to store up sunlight and turn it on at will. I can believe anything after eating this gingerbread. It is so concrete, not something I read in a book."

Alice walked out of the yard feeling as though she had been eating sunlight. It made her feel so much a part of the solar system, she had taken sustenance into her being from the direct sunlight just as the green grass was making chlorophyl. She thought of Langley and how he had walked along this same walk, worked under this same locust tree, and dreamed dreams.

"Man has only begun to discover things in this world, but he needs peace, and freedom and a quiet oasis away from things like this," she thought, locking the gate after her. ELIZABETH ALDRICH.

Streamlined Bard.

The latest move to "streamline" Shakespeare and give his players more racy titles has led one Broadway producer to consider putting on "The Taming of the Shrew" under the title "A Lady Surrenders."

In the spirit of service we are prompted to co-operate with the aforementioned producer, and offer the following titles for Shakespeare's plays:

"Henry VIII." "Anybody's Husband."

"Macbeth," "Dangerous Wives."

"King Lear," "Disobedient Daughters."

"Merchant of Venice." "Desire of the Flesh."

"Romeo and Juliet." "Forbidden Sweeties."

"Merry Wives of Windsor," "Unshackled Women."

"Midsummer Night's Dream." "The Strained Interlude."

"Richard III." "Women and Horses."

"Hamlet." "Her Madman Lover."

Jim And Joe.

Jim and Joe.
Jim Farley.
Joe Jacobs.
Both in the fight business.

PEGLER.

Jim the Prize Fight Commissioner and politician.

Joe the little hustler, known as Yussel the Muscle.

Joe saw a young fellow coming along. Strong, tough, ambitious, determined but cold. He saw Max Schmeling and hooked a finger through his lapel.

"String along with me, Kid, and you'll be champion."

Schmeling strung along with Yussel.

Jim saw a young politician coming along. A New Yorker. A Roosevelt. Tough, ambitious, but cold.

"String along with me, Kid, and you'll be President."

Franklin D. Roosevelt strung along with Jim.

We in the prize fight business had seen the careers of Jack Dempsey and Jack Kearns, of Gene Tunney and Billy Gibson.

Kearns had been disinherited. Gibson had been disinherited.

Schmeling became champion, but meantime there had been changes in German political life. Joe was a Jewish boy, and Schmeling was a blond Aryan, blue-eyed German with black, bristly hair and squinty black eyes who had once said, a long time before the discovery of blond, blue-eyed Aryans, that he thought he must be descended from the Mongols.

• • • •

AS TIME marched on, Joe had to go to Germany. And though now disinherited and hating Max Schmeling, who hated and missed no occasion to humiliate him, Joe got into the ring in Germany and stood in mocking respectfulness while tribute was paid to Hitler and to everything that was knifing the very heart of Joe Jacobs and his mother. He stood thus with his hat on and with a cigar in his mouth, which was a magnificent, if unintentional, insult to Schmeling and Hitlerism.

As time marched on, Franklin D. Roosevelt became President and Jim Farley went to Washington. Jim didn't belong there. Jim was over his head in Washington. He was just a nice, sincere organization Democrat. He believed that being a Democrat meant playing the game, distributing the jobs and doing as the Republicans had done.

But Mr. Roosevelt also began to develop ideas 'way over the head of his friend and manager, Jim Farley. At first Jim used to see him all the time. They were pals. They chewed with the same teeth, as the saying goes.

In the career of Max Schmeling, after he became a big man, there have been faults for which little Yussel the Muscle has had to take the blame. In the career of Mr. Roosevelt, since he became President, there have been faults for which Jim Farley takes the blame. There was Farleyism. Jim took the blame for Farleyism; although it was Rooseveltism, as he and Mr. Roosevelt privately knew and the rest of us in the racket understood. There was that airmail-and-the-army thing. Twelve boys died. Jim took the fall for that, although the country knew that Jim wouldn't have ordered those boys into the air, unprepared as they were to fly the mails, on his own account. What did Jim know about the airmail or the flyability of the Army's pilots or its stuff? Jim was a Prize Fight Commissioner, a politician and a builder's supply man.

• • • •

SCHMELING repudiated, humiliated and, in all but the official, legal sense, discredited Yussel.

Mr. Farley's champion started running with a set of new-found friends who regarded Jim as a person of inferior intellect and political caste.

Mr. Roosevelt set up a political Aryan to run against Jim for Governor of New York State, the job on which Jim had set his heart. Mr. Roosevelt's man, Mr. Jackson, was quickly knocked over, but, nevertheless, his gratitude to the man with whom he had strung along to become President was expressed there.

Two days ago Mr. Farley stood up in meeting and denounced the foes of his man, President Roosevelt. Still loyal, still the manager, though discredited and humiliated.

He gave the salute, but let me hope that, like little Yussel the Muscle in Hamburg, he kept his hat on and didn't take the cigar out of his mouth.

Henry—Now, Ma, you know how I hate banquets, speeches, interviews and the New Deal.

Mrs. Ford—How was the President?

Henry—He acted a little like he thought I was trying to sell him a beach wagon.

Mrs. Ford—The newspapers didn't carry any report of the conversation.

Henry—No; I guess the Democrats thought there'd be more publicity if it was all left to rumors.

Mrs. Ford—What did you say to Mr. Roosevelt? Did you tell him?

Henry—Tell him what?

Mrs. Ford—All you said you were going to tell him the first time you met him face to face.

Henry (sheepishly)—Aw, shucks! I didn't make it as strong as all that.

Mrs. Ford—I was afraid you'd lose your nerve at the last minute. You didn't go into your shell and just say nothing, did you, Henry?

Henry—Oh, I said enough; but I had to be careful.

Mrs. Ford—Why?

Henry—Don't forget I was surrounded!

Little Entente

Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania Continue to Consult Despite Pawn Status Since "Big Four" Emergence.

By Mary N. Hawes,

IN THE SHADOW of another Nazi thrust to the southeast, the foreign ministers of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania assembled on May 4. High up in the Carpathian Mountains, at the beautiful resort which is King Carol's favorite retreat, the Permanent Council of the Little Entente met to consider its precarious position in the cockpit of Europe. The Europe they discussed had changed suddenly—beyond all recognition—with the disappearance of Austria, the increasing danger to Czechoslovakia, England's pact with Italy and her partnership with France.

During the 17 years of its existence the Little Entente has continuously belied the annual predictions of its forthcoming rupture. But again the three foreign ministers have convened and kept cooperation alive in the most dangerous period Europe has known since the war, and at the most critical time in the career of their alliance. Europe has weathered many storms, the Little Entente has met other threats, but today the peril is fundamental. The retrogression from collective security to nineteenth century "Balance of Power"—a system of maneuvering and counter-balancing—threatens to multiply world rivalries and crises, and destroys the very basis on which the Little Entente has functioned. It overlooks the difference between aggressive and pacific intentions of the states involved, which is the vital element in any realistic balance.

To the Little Entente states the problem of survival and readjustment in a world of bilateral treaties is stupendous. Their co-operation was built on the principle of collective security, and even today, in this changed world, they reassert their loyalty to the principles of the League of Nations.

Entente Originally Aimed Against Hungary.

THE ORIGINAL purpose of this triple alliance between Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia was mutual defense against the revisionist aims of Hungary. But there was much more to it than the fear that Budapest would seek to regain the territory she lost to her three neighbors. The bonds of mutual interest were backed by ties of genuine friendship. Years before, in 1905, Serb, Slovak and Rumanian deputies in the Diet at Budapest formed a "Club of Nationalities," which was one of the ancestors of the Little Entente, and in which the present prime minister of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Hodza, was a moving spirit.

With collective security gone by the board, the Little Entente must now adapt itself to the new (or prewar) game in which the issue of peace or war in Danubian Europe is to be settled by outside powers. All three states have long been aware that the foundation of their original co-operation was crumbling and that they must build other props. Among themselves they have been working on closer economic relations—increasing their mutual trade, studying the possibility of a customs union, regulating railway and postal communications. Later they hoped to extend economic co-operation throughout the whole Danubian area under the Hodza plan to include Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria.

But the anschluss has wiped out one of the vital parties to the project and increased the danger of German economic domination in Danubian and Balkan Europe—a domination which was so skilfully nurtured by Schacht's visits to Belgrade, Athens, Sofia and Budapest in June, 1936. With the increasing danger that the Nazis will try to strangle Czechoslovakia economically, and the awakening of France and England to this threat, the Little Entente's economic co-operation may gain a new and wider significance.

The political influence of the Little Entente as a group has faded with the return of the "Balance of Power" system. To have any voice in such a system a small power either must attract the interest of a great power or play the dangerous game of arousing jealousy among rivals.

Each Member Has Own Foreign Problem.

EACH MEMBER of the Little Entente has its own particular foreign bugbear, and since the weakening of the League each has sought its own particular safeguards. The three states are not pledged to follow a common foreign policy. But since the signing of their pact of organization in February, 1933, they must get the consent of their partners to any treaties with third states which may affect the political situation.

When Polish and German opposition dashed the hopes for an Eastern Locarno, Czechoslovakia sought additional safety in a pact of mutual aid with Soviet Russia. Both her partners consented, although Yugoslavia, to this day, still refuses to recognize the U. S. S. R. Neither Rumania nor Yugoslavia is legally pledged to go to Czechoslovakia's aid if she is attacked by Germany. Their mutual defense is still limited to the case of Hungarian aggression. As both countries are one or more steps farther removed from Hitler's ambitions than Prague, they have maintained a noncommittal attitude toward Germany. But this may change, for both Rumania and Yugoslavia have German minorities and Fascist parties already infected with Hitler's propaganda.

Czechoslovakia could hardly hope that her Little Entente partners would pledge to support her against Germany when not even England would give such an undertaking, although its word would probably suffice to forestall the attack. Evidently German-Czech relations were not even discussed at Sinaia; but Krofta, the Czech foreign minister, tried to get Rumania's permission for the passage of Soviet troops through its territory. Otherwise the Russians cannot reach Czechoslovakia except by air. Apparently the permission was not forthcoming although Czechoslovakia granted credits to Rumania long ago for the construction of the necessary connecting railway. The Rumanians fear that the Russians might stop to take back their former territory of Bessarabia, possibly as a defense measure against Hitler's drive toward the Ukraine. Hitler, moreover, might consider the transit of Soviet troops across Rumania sufficient justification for an attack on Carol's country.

Rumania and Yugoslavia are in no position to promise aid to Czechoslovakia unless England and France lead the way. It is the great powers who have sacrificed collective security and now play the game which will forestall war, or lead Czechoslovakia to the firing line.

Danubian Peace Turns Today On "Big Four."

ANY RESPONSIBILITY for peace in Danubian Europe that formerly rested on the Little Entente is now on the shoulders of the "Big Four." Only in the political field of relations with Budapest do the three states maintain a little independent influence. Over a year ago Hungary and her three neighbors started their search for a formula whereby the Little Entente should recognize Hungary's right to re-arm. Everyone knows that Hungary has been re-arming for years, but Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia oppose a unilateral denunciation of any clause in the Treaty of Trianon, for fear of setting a precedent for revision.

Hungary held out for concessions to her minorities in the Little Entente states as a quid pro quo for consulting them, instead of denouncing the clauses in the manner of German and Austria. The Little Entente felt they were making a concession in agreeing to accept re-armament and nothing more was owing to Hungary.

At the Sinaia conference the Magyar minority issue came to a deadlock, although the Permanent Council was careful to announce it would continue to try for an understanding. The common problem of Magyar minorities may become increasingly important as the Nazis in Hungary further excite the revisionist dreams. Their present strategy is to create bad feeling against Czechoslovakia, but the largest and formerly most publicized Magyar minority is in Rumania.

The most significant achievement of the Little Entente meeting was that the alliance continued to survive in present-day Europe. For the moment Yugoslavia is the weakest link, for she is in the best position of the three. She lies off the route to the Ukraine; her German and Magyar minorities are smaller than those of Czechoslovakia and Rumania; and her Fascist parties are weak. Hitler would hesitate to dominate Yugoslavia for fear of a row with Mussolini; and, lastly, the Anglo-Italian pact works in Belgrade's favor. The Duce made concessions to Yugoslavia in March, 1937, so he could shut Great Britain out of the Adriatic. Now it looks as if Yugoslavia will not be forced to choose between her old friend, England, and her recent flirt, Italy. To Belgrade the ties of the Little Entente may now seem a liability, but in the future they may again prove an asset as they have in the past.

At a time when Danubian Europe is in grave danger, the influence of the Little Entente over the fate of the region has weakened. A "Balance of Power" system or a four or five power pact threatens to turn the small states back into mere pawns.

IF [Herr Hitler] can obtain all he wants without fighting . . . he will keep the sword sheathed. If not, before long . . . he will use the ultima ratio. There's only one way for us to prevent adventures. Its to know what we want and affirm it . . . to be strong . . . to remain in close contact with our allies. Its to group ourselves with all those menaced by Pan-Germanism again triumphant.—Lucien Bourgues in Le Petit Parisien, Paris.

IT STANDS ME in good stead today that fate decided that Braunau-on-the-Inn should be my birthplace. That little town lies on the frontier between the two German states, the reunion of which we younger ones regard as a work worthy of accomplishment by all the means in our power.

German Austria will have to return to the great German motherland, but not for economic reasons. No, no! Even if reunion, looked at from that point of view, were a matter of indifference, nay, even if it were actually injurious, it would still have to come.

Common blood should belong to a common Reich. The German people have no right to dabble in a colonial policy as long as they are unable to gather their own sons into a common state. Not till the confines of the Reich include every single German and are not certain of being able to nourish him can there be a moral right for Germany to acquire territory abroad whilst her people are in need.

The plow will then be the sword, and the coming world's daily bread will be watered by the tears of war.

Thus it comes about that the little frontier town is to me the symbol of a great enterprise.—Adolf Hitler in "Mein Kampf."

CZECHOSLOVAKIA creates its modern, democratic system with the aid of its own moral, social and historical forces and integrates itself as an original and particular element among European and world democracies.

We are notably responsible for our state in the sense that it must fulfill its duties toward other national and cultural communities which for geographical and historical reasons are also part of our state. But a nationalism devoid of . . . democratic culture [cannot] . . . understand the national rights of others and still less organize collaboration with them. Czechoslovakia democracy fully understands that after a definite consolidation of the new Central Europe from a point of view of international law, national sentiment remains one of the strongest forces actuating humanity. And that is a statement which greatly reinforces Czechoslovakia's position in Europe.— From an address by Premier Milan Hodza of Czechoslovakia at Prague.

Development of the Hungarian army will serve to increase the nation's security and also reinforce Hungary's conscience of its independence and sentiment of its dignity.—From a speech by Premier Daranyi of Hungary.

IT APPEARS with greater clarity than ever that the League of Nations cannot be a universal organ in an epoch of aggressions . . . The countries in a state of war cannot be members of an international organization that tries to prevent war. Under these conditions all plans to reform the League seemingly designed to facilitate the return to Geneva of those who have left there will be in vain . . . Adaptation of the League to aggressors' desires is not only harmful but aimless . . . States opposed to aggression [should] . . . create . . . an effective League of pacific nations. Such a possibility cannot be excluded.—Izvestia, Moscow.

Satisfied Swiss

By Edwin Muller

"How Do They Do It?"

FOR 500 years no Swiss army has crossed its frontiers to seek aggrandizement. And yet, of all the "have-not" nations Switzerland seems to have the least.

It has a small territory and a high density of population, with not nearly enough arable land to feed itself. It has no iron, coal or oil. It lacks the raw materials its industries need. It has neither colonies nor access to the sea.

A nation with such handicaps should be in a poor way, according to the dictators of the other "have-not" nations—Germany, Italy and Japan—the ones that are giving up butter for guns with which to improve their positions. Surely the Swiss must live a bare and meager life.

What are the facts?

Well, we consider the United States the wealthiest nation on earth. In prosperous 1928, our per capita wealth was $2,098. But that of Switzerland was $3,126.

• • • •

THE SWISS distrust the concentration of great power in the hands of one man. The executive power is vested in a commission of seven, in which the President ranks equally with the other six. The executive is subordinated to the legislative, and the legislative arm is supplemented by an effective use of the initiative and the referendum. The work of government is carried on by permanent officials, civil service appointees.

Another characteristic is the tendency to decentralize. Large powers are entrusted to the states—the cantons—and on those powers the central government cannot encroach. It must be so. The Swiss have no racial unity. They are split into French, German, Italian and others. They speak four different languages. Yet these elements have co-operated in one government for centuries. They are tolerant of each other's local culture and customs, never trying to force them into a standardized pattern.

In Switzerland, generally speaking, the government is behind business but not in it. The Swiss wants to run his own business with as little interference as possible, yet he recognizes situations where the government must interfere.

There's no move to make Switzerland self-sufficient. They believe in free trade, and make the most sparing use of tariffs.

Navy Projects 'Lookout Line' Of 10,000 Miles

Alaska - Hawaii - Samoa-Panama Link Would Give Warning of Enemy.

By the Associated Press.

The Navy's projected air bases in Alaska and on Midway Island will be lookout and signal stations on a 10,000-mile line of "information" in the Pacific, informed persons indicated yesterday.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, recently disclosed to Congress that the Navy had mapped such a line "to obtain information from the enemy" in any Pacific conflict.

Belief was expressed in naval circles that the line would extend from Kodiak Island, Alaska, and Dutch Harbor, in the eastern Aleutians, southward through Midway, Wake and Canton islands, and thence south and eastward to American Samoa and the Panama Canal.

Would Guide U. S. Fleet.

In the event of a Pacific war, radio stations at these points and the Navy's long range patrol planes would be able to report quickly any enemy movements, thus guiding an intercepting American fleet.

Emphasizing that no fixed defense frontier was contemplated, Admiral Leahy explained that "the line of defense may be much closer to our own shores than that, it may be beyond that, but it is a line where we expect to obtain sufficient information upon which to base our operations."

Japan has such a line, officials believe, extending through the mandated islands southward from Tokyo.

For an air base at Kodiak Island, the Navy has asked a $5,000,000 Congressional authorization. To the West the Navy already has indicated plans to establish a training base for airmen at Dutch Harbor.

To Develop Midway Harbor.

Southward from Dutch Harbor 1,613 nautical miles is Midway, where army engineers have made preliminary surveys for a $1,000,000 seaplane harbor development. The Navy has asked more than $700,000 to create a seaplane base. Transpacific planes of Pan American Airways already stop there.

From Midway the line extends to Wake, 1,029 miles distant. This is another Pan American way point, able now to accommodate 25-ton commercial flying boats.

Little Work Required.

From Wake a patrol plane would have to fly 1,845 miles to Canton Island, taken over recently by the Interior Department in a surprise maneuver. The planes have covered much greater distances than this, however, from San Francisco to Honolulu. Officials have said little work would be needed to create a base at Canton.

From Canton to Pago Pago, naval stations in American Samoa, is but 690 nautical miles. From Samoa to Panama is a longer route but one expected to require little guarding.

It was stressed in naval circles that the projected line of information was in no sense aggressive.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

More reorganization backfire: Growling in retreat from the recent fray, the U. F. W. A. sees the reorganization defeat as a challenge for redoubling of efforts to end such abuses as overtime lack of machinery to settle individual employe grievances, sub-standard wages and the like, and for a remedy suggests passage of four Federal workers bills—those on appeals, minimum wage, overtime and five-day week . . . We know one means of halting all feminine effort in a Government building: Send Mary Pickford down the corridors . . .

Bradley, chief of the Archives Division of Motion Pictures and Sound Recording, who is in charge of preserving historic films. Miss Pickford spent two hours in the building. She entered fairly unobserved; a stream of people poured out behind her . . .

They tried—the other day—to stop U. F. W. A. Local, No. 7, from circulating the publication, The Federal Organizer, in the I. C. C. Building. Such a practice, it was held, would prevent I. C. C.'ers from working—for, as it was reasoned, how can they work and read The Federal Organizer at the same time? Of course, the answer would be to have a ruling that people should work and not read The Federal Organizer. The distribution of the publication would seem to have little to do with the case. But anyhow, the U. F. W. A. headquarters sent a committee, headed by Jim Gorham, over there to happy effect. There is generally happy effect when things are reasoned out. The ruling against the distribution was quashed, and, besides, the chiefs asked the committee just what—in principle—was wanted? Three things were enumerated:

1. The recognition of the right of I. C. C. employes to join a union; 2, the right of employes to be represented by a union, and 3, the right to distribute and post notices. All these were taken under advisement and an answer is expected soon . . .

U. S. to Gather 2 Billion Oz. of Silver at 'Point'

Drill-Proof Doors a Foot Thick to Guard Hoard in Warehouse.

By the Associated Press.

Uncle Sam will start lugging a couple of billion dollars worth of silver to West Point, N. Y., starting June 1, the Treasury disclosed yesterday.

On the army reservation where the military academy is situated the last of many tons of concrete are being poured into a warehouse for the white metal.

Behind its foot-thick walls are 23 cubicles which will hold 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver—approximately all the silver bullion and coin owned by the Treasury. By act of Congress, that much silver is worth $1.29 an ounce or $2,580,000,000, but its world market value is only 43 cents an ounce or $860,000,000.

All Above Ground.

The silver now is stored mainly at the Government's mints at San Francisco, Denver and Philadelphia.

Unlike the gold vaults recently built at Fort Knox, Ky., the West Point building will keep its metal above the ground. At Fort Knox, more than $5,000,000,000 worth of gold is buried in subterranean strong boxes.

Silver is so bulky that the Treasury has arranged for delivery trucks to drive right into the vaults at West Point to unload.

The unloading will not be visible to outsiders for more reasons, however, than the shutting of doors behind delivery trucks. This modernistic treasure house has no windows. Light and air enter only through skylights.

Door a Foot Thick.

Intruders would have to pass armed guards and penetrate at least three doors to get to Uncle Sam's wealth, including the master vault door which is a mere 12½ inches thick and built of drill-proof and flame-proof metal. Opening and closing of these doors will be recorded automatically on a timing mechanism.

A 3-foot corridor between the exterior wall of the building and the wall of the vaults will be guarded from watchtowers at the four corners.

Although it will be difficult for ordinary persons to get at all this silver, millions of Americans can display pieces of paper entitling them to pieces of it. These papers are the currency of various denominations which have the words "silver certificate" printed on them.

Brother and Sister-in-Law of General Albert Cox Have Completed Year's Vacation Tour; Will Leave for Soochow Soon.

By Elizabeth Ford.

An S. R. O. sign was placed on the umbrella stand at Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox's home yesterday as friends flocked to the reception given for Gen. Cox's brother and sister-in-law, the Rev. Francis and Mrs. Cox.

The latter have been on a year's vacation tour of New England, Florida and the Middle West. They will leave soon for their post in Soochow, China. They are staying with Mrs. Cox's mother, Mrs. W. A. Moncure, in Alexandria.

Dr. Chengting T. Wang, Miss Yoeh Wang, his daughter, and Mrs. Blanche Manor, of Raleigh, N. C., who is the house guest of Mrs. Cox, were in the receiving line at the party.

Elsie Janis Flies Here to Cheer War Mothers in Arlington Visit

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Elsie Janis was guest of honor yesterday at the annual reception given by the American War Mothers at their national headquarters, 1527 New Hampshire avenue, following their Mother's Day service at Arlington. Miss Janis, "Sweetheart of the A. E. F.," flew to Washington to take part in the exercises at the invitation of Mrs. Irving Fairweather, president of the organization, because "the girls" wanted her and she felt it would make them happy, she said.

Although she has been coming to the Capital off and on for 40 years, yesterday was the first time she had ever visited Arlington. "I'm glad it was," said Miss Janis. "No other time could have been so impressive and shown Arlington as it should be as the War Mothers' services did."

She wore a brown and white print dress and a brown wool coat with a matching felt beret on the top of which perched two little daisies. She chatted with the war mothers, kept them laughing with her quick humor, and patted them on the shoulders as she declined to take the tea which was proffered her. There were guests not only from the District but from New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other States who had come to Washington especially for the Mother's Day observance.

Miss Janis will go to Point Perry today and then fly back to California. She continues her interest in "the boys" through her visits to the hospitals, where she is always welcome and goes and comes without any fanfare. She visited Mount Alto while she was here.

Mrs. Fairweather received yesterday with Miss Janis. She wore a black sheer dress, embroidered with white daisies, and, at the ceremonies in Arlington, wore a large black hat. Among other national officers present were Mrs. R. E. Ridenhour, of Concord, N. C., first vice president; Mrs. William A. Gordon, of North Braddock, Pa., fourth vice president; Mrs. Lizbeth A. Waters, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Mary T. Shanahan, custodian of records, both of Washington, and Mrs. William H. Marshall, of Philadelphia, chairman of legislation.

Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. Ridenhour, Mrs. Shanahan and Mrs. B. E. Portiaux, of Charlotte, N. C., alternated in pouring at the tea table which was set in the room adjoining the drawing room. Others who assisted in serving were Mrs. Henrietta Clark, hostess at the headquarters; Mrs. Eleanor Wagner, and a group of young women including Mrs. Ted Walker, and the Misses Margaret Redding, Helen Cullinan, Helen Hobbs, Mary O'Connor, Marie McGowan, Helen Ryan and Frances Basar.

Among the guests were Mrs. Noble Newport Potts, of Washington, president of the National Patriotic Council; Mrs. Alice Park, president of the Pennsylvania War Mothers, and other Pennsylvania women, including Mrs. Theresa Kelly, State corresponding secretary; Mrs. William T. Marshall, recording secretary; Mrs. Marjory O'Flynn, custodian, and Mrs. Thomas Cassidy, treasurer. ## About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WASHINGTON society enjoyed its most out-doorsy week-end to date. If there was a single cocktail party given here over Saturday or Sunday, we don't know about it. Almost everybody is three shades redder or darker than they were on Friday, thanks to the Warrenton Gold Cup, the Kentucky Derby and the Washington Horse Show out at Meadowbrook.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The Warrenton course presented rather an amusing sight on Saturday. About a thousand people were huddled together under the one big tree, trying to get out of the hot sun. The overflow straggled about mopping their brows. "Among those present" was Miss Dorothy Villard, who has come to Washington for a stay and is at the Anchorage. She is the daughter of Oswald Garrison Villard, former editor of the Nation, and still a contributor thereto. She is most attractive and interested in "causes."

* * * *

NOW FOR NEWS of some erstwhile Washingtonians. Simon Whitney and Frank Currie, down from New York, enlivened the stag lines over the week-end. Frank stayed with Sherlock Davis and Si put up with Francis Walker. Both were with the New Deal here once; now one is with an investment house in New York and the other is a partner of John Byrnes, former general counsel of the SEC . . . From Cambridge, Mass., comes the news that Thomas Eliot is going to run for Congress as a Democrat. The grandson of the late Charles Eliot, Harvard's most famous president, Tom was one of the bright young men who came here in the early days of the New Deal. A graduate of Harvard and Harvard Law School, he was assistant solicitor under Miss Perkins and then general counsel of the Social Security Board. This past winter he has been teaching at Harvard's new school of government administration. One of his districts in the coming race for Congress is Brookline, Mass., wealthiest town in the country, where mere mention of the name Roosevelt to one of the residents is apt to bring on a stroke.

* * * *

OFF FOR OTTAWA are Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson and their daughter, Mrs. John Farr Simmons. Caroline Simmons came down from her home in Canada for the week-end and drove her parents up yesterday for a visit of several weeks. Jack Simmons continues to be charge d'affaires of our legation in Ottawa until somebody is appointed to succeed the very popular Norman Armour.

MRS. Higginson Rogers has cards out for a cocktail party on Saturday, May 21, from 5:30 to 7, at her residence in Georgetown.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Is Heartbroken by Man's Wish to Sever Tentative Engagement; What Can She Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 24 years old and have been going practically "steady" with a young man for 15 months. We were both very much in love with each other, and still are. He wanted to get married but not until he was financially able, and with the job he now has it would be impossible for him ever to marry. He has tried time and again to get a better-paying job, but has met with disappointment every time.

• • • •

When I was with him a few nights ago, suddenly he became very solemn and finally told me what was on his mind. After much thought, he had finally decided it would be best if we broke off, since he has no prospects of getting a better job. He said if he ever did, he would come back to me at once. I begged him to go on just as we were and maybe some miracle would happen, but he said he would rather stop seeing me altogether, and seemed very determined.

• • • •

Honestly, I'm so desperately in love with him, and already miss him so much, that I don't know how I can go on without him. My thoughts the whole day long are of him, and I go around in a daze. I will thank you for any advice you can possibly give me. DESPERATE.

Subscribe to Decision.

DEAR DESPERATE: In my opinion, you have no choice but to subscribe to the young man's decision to end the relationship. Whatever his reasons for wishing to break the tentative engagement (and I am not at all convinced that failure to find a better job, or to see immediate prospects of increasing his earnings, is the one and only reason) the fact that he wishes to be free makes it imperative for you to free him. In letting him go now without moaning or quibbling, you will be strengthening whatever hold you have on his imagination and emotions. If you cling and wail, reproach and upbraid, plead and protest, you will be giving him reason for regretting the fact that he ever met you in the first place, and became so deeply involved with you in the second place.

• • • •

The truth of the matter, no doubt, is that he has decided, after 15 months' association, that you do not meet all his requirements for a permanent life partner, and that he wouldn't wish to marry you even if he were financially in a position to do so. Knowing, however, how you feel about him, and wishing to spare your pride and feelings as much as possible, he probably thought it would be more expedient to blame the economic situation, rather than fundamental incompatability, for his decision to break off. It is one argument which cannot well be refuted, whereas you might think yourself justified in arguing until doom's day that personality in; compatibility could be overcome.

• • • •

Any two young persons who commit themselves to an indefinitely prolonged courtship, which has little prospect of eventuating in marriage, are flirting with the likelihood of meeting, sooner or later, with just such a heartbreaking disappointment as this. For th reason, long drawn-out engagements and mutually exclusive sweethearting associations of long duration are wisely frowned upon and advised against. The time to guard against potential heartbreak is early in the game. When two persons recognize the fact that they could love each other, yet must admit that marriage seems out of the question unless some miracle occurs, they should avoid each other almost as enemies; for they are, actually, potential enemies of each other's happiness.

• • • •

It will take time and courageous effort to outlive the heartbreak of this boy's decision, but, in my opinion, that is the only road open to you. Don't waste a moment's time brooding about his decision, and trying to invent ways and means of winning him to a reconsideration of it. Begin today, this minute, establishing social contacts with other persons who can play an important part in a life that will, in all probability, have to be lived without him. If it is any consolation, you may know that few persons indeed arrive at the age of 30 without having passed through one or more serious heartbreaks resulting from abortive love relationships.

• • • •

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Use of 'Cheap' Glasses.

A woman writes me to ask whether inexpensive glasses, costing about a dollar, will harm her and her husband's eyes. They are both about 48 years old. She says that she cannot afford expensive glasses and bought these at a department store.

This is a very interesting and important question. It is unfortunate that the economic situation has to enter into it, but since it does I think a sensible reply is that in people whose eyes are becoming blurred on account of age, no harm will come from the use of the inexpensive glasses. The eye disability of old age is entirely different from that of younger people and does not necessarily need such careful examination and fitting.

Presbyopia, or hardening of the lens in middle age, results in inability to do close reading or close work of any kind. It is simply due to the fact that the lens of the eye no longer is elastic and cannot be made to focus on near objects. As time goes on, stronger and stronger glasses are needed, but there is no reason why these glasses need cost a great deal of money and, in fact, I am quite convinced that any glasses which allow a person in this condition to read and do close work will do no harm. An indication of this is the fact that old people who have mislaid their glasses often borrow those of others of about the same age, and even after using them for an hour or two do not have a headache or evidence of eye strain.

There is certainly no reason why expensive frames need be used for these glasses because they usually have to be discarded within a year or more, until the eyes finally get set at about the age of 55.

In view of the economic problem involved here, I really believe in every community some charitable person or organization should offer to collect the old spectacle frames and the old lenses that people from the age of 45 are discarding, so that they may be used by others who are not fortunate enough in this world's goods to procure proper ones.

'That Cool Look' Is Now Essential In Hair Stylings

Upswept Ringlets or Rolls Predominate for Summer.

By Ethel Ehlen.

THE POPULAR upswept coiffure is assuming new interpretations for the summer months. With torrid days not so far away, hair stylists are devising smart and flattering hair-dos which are at the same time cool and comfortable—and in harmony with the current fashions. For women who have been wearing paige boy bobs or similar long hair styles and who do not wish to cut their hair, a number of cool, chic and youthful coiffures have been created. In like manner, the person with shortened tresses will find many alluring versions styled according to the feminine and romantic trends.

You may choose between either ringlets or rolls for your "upped" coiffure this summer—both are deemed smart by hair stylists. And, the hair, by the way, especially for very warm weather, is not piled on top of the head, but up and away, for comfort. Further aids to coolness are given by exposing the ears and forehead, as well as the back of the neck. Whatever influence you may choose to follow, the theme throughout all of the newest hair stylings is simplicity. There is a note of quaintness in the latest coiffures too, and as paradoxical as it may seem, they are youthful and at the same time sophisticated.

Among the new coiffures introduced at the New York State Hairdressers and Cosmetologists style show in New York last night was the "plateau profile," a modern interpretation of the Versailles period, particularly Louis XIV. It is high sweeping, away from the face with a flattened high top effect; flattering to all types and ages and adaptable to both blondes and brunettes. This version of the upswept movement in hair styles, as illustrated in the two coiffures on this page, is a forecast of what to expect next fall, according to M. Dumas, chairman of the style committee of the show.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

TO PARAPHRASE THE poet feller, "Oh to be on Fifth avenue, now that May is here!" Well, I am, so I'm not squawking, and I wish you were too. There's not a sight in the world to beat it, these sunny afternoons when the weather is the last word in perfection. Three months from now we'll be cursing feebly and dreaming of the sea and the high hills, but right now the New Yorker wouldn't trade her city for any spot on earth and all the rags on Vionnet's racks!

ALICE HUGHES

In keeping with the big town's exciting beauty, an unusual crop of gorgeous girls and wonder men has leaped from the good earth with the tulips. Any time that absorbing and fascinating spectacle labeled Marlene Dietrich shows herself around town, the place perks up and prances. She has been among us, with her pound of emeralds, her lovely underpinnings and her love for watching the birdy in the camera. Of course, she is now chary of displaying the legs that first brought her fame. Even as she hit Grand Central depot, she baffled the photographers. "And now, Miss Dietrich, will you sit on that trunk and cross the knees?" tried one lensman. "No legs," said the Potsdam peach. "What, no legs?" moaned the cameraman. "No legs!" said the Dietrich, firmly. There were no legs.

The Teutonic beauty stopped at no mere hotel, but at the Park Avenue duplex of Bert Taylor, big Wall Street man and brother of Countess Dorothy di Frasso, who has promoted the better Hollywoodites socially, and moved them to the right side of the tracks when they hit New York. Marlene also likes to go out nights, and her favorite spot is the Cuban haunt called "La Conga." Her nightly presence hasn't hurt business there one bit. How the rhumba rages!

• • • •

Lesley Bogert, Gotham's chief rival of Dietrich for filling sheer hosiery with excitement, has come back to town, but so far there has been no contest. As for Marlene, she has recently signed up for three pictures, and has just left for Europe to visit the spouse and the daughter, Maria, now taller than mamma. Oh, you'd better be on the Avenue—right now! Run—don't walk!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Mother's Day passed off with no serious public disturbance, and the militia stayed quietly in the armories. The men-folks wore their carnations with righteous smirks, the wire services worked double-shift, and the florists did folk-dances in Central Park when the last posy was peddled.

• • • •

Hedda Hopper, a colleague of mine after many years as a trouper, has been around town during the publishers' convention. Oh, well, so have I. Hedda's a wonder-girl. Though she has a great big son, she doesn't look an hour over 35, and is as smart as seven buggy whips. She told me over luncheon that our famous "21" supper-spot would be empty if it were not for movie actors in town. Night club business, just now, is too terrible.

• • • •

Traipsing the Avenue, I see lovely Betty Lawford, long the bathtub siren in "The Women," strolling along with a handsome young man NOT Ted Husing, her swain of the past season. Oh, well, Teddy must have been announcing something on the air. Incidentally, that show has been doing such mighty business that its local run has been extended indefinitely.

• • • •

Our crowd was simply aghast at the news that Mary Lewis, vice-president of a very famous Fifth avenue store, where she had toiled since 1919, had severed the connection. Practically no store or fashion work was done by the girls the day the news broke. "Why and how?" were the questions face to face and by phone, and "What will the store do without Mary?" was on many a lip. Mary's a great merchant and promoter—and no doubt many a shop is bidding for her frantically.

YOUR FIGURE, SIR!

English Schools Discover Danger of Exercise to Some Boys.

THE NEXT TIME A Yank goes to Oxford, he will find a change in the place. After more than 700 years, during which playing fields furnished the athletic student with exercise and a chance for glory, the university wants a gymnasium for the average boy. This demand for formal gymnastics is significant of what is happening throughout the English school system.

The English schools have been justly famous for their playing fields. At least one historic victory of the English troops was credited to the dauntless spirit engendered by team games. But a few years ago progressive educators began to ponder the value of these games to the average boy, and their discoveries made them shake their heads.

The average boy, they found, has some minor physical defect and unless corrective measures are taken such defects tend to become steadily worse. A weakness of the spine may become curvature of the spine, and weakness of the feet may develop into flat feet. Harry Evans, headmaster of the Betteshanger School in Kent, summed up the new movement as follows:

"Games are splendid for the boys in perfect physical condition and any school can turn out cream at the top. But the average boy with a minor physical defect is not only handicapped at the games but some of them are altogether wrong for him and may cause the defect to grow more pronounced. The average boy is one who is important, and the object of the new movement in physical education is to meet his needs. We want him to have the physical training that will develop a strong physique."

You may be one of those fortunate parents whose youngster has no defects to overcome, but if your child is the average you will be keenly interested in the Betteshanger program. On entering the school a new boy is given a thorough medical examination, and specific exercises are prescribed by the examining physician. These exercises are then considered an important part of his school curriculum.

Most of the exercises demonstrated by a group from Betteshanger for the American schools were patterned on the old Greek athletes, and were evolved by Miss Margaret Morris, of London. Stretching and balancing exercises for posture corrections and foot exercises were stressed. Breathing is synchronized with the movements and the exercises are performed to music.

In many of the American schools gymnasiums and swimming pools provide healthful recreation for the students, and the latest trend in this country is, toward adaptive games. The English movement however, has become so general in a comparatively short time that we watch its growth with a lively interest. The English gymnasiums may become as famous as the playing fields.

A Smart Handbag.

He is always making fun of your bag. "Why do you carry around all that old junk?" he keeps asking. And you remember that the charming Mrs. Smiley, whom he liked so much at the cocktail party, carried a stunning, shiny bag—flat as a pancake.

All right. You will have a nice flat bag, too. The next time he goes anywhere with you he will not be disgraced by your overstuffed hand valise. You will look just as trim and gay as Mrs. Smiley—with a light, waterlike bag carried jauntily under your arm.

• • • •

You are going to be perfectly ruthless, you decide, as you begin your bag housecleaning. First, those recipts for purchased merchandise . . . still, what if the goods didn't come? And they are handy to write on backs of. Well, even so, out they go.

Those safety pins simply must come out—still, what if your shoulder strap broke? Or the elastic in your step-ins? Oh, why be a pessimist? Then there's that darning cotton . . . If you got a run—no, you will hope for the best. And those clips . . . they are handy . . . but no, you simply must have a flat bag.

Those hairpins . . . oh, well, you will leave just two. The little notebook? You have so much valuable data in it . . . still, it takes up so much space. Besides, Mrs. Smiley would never carry a notebook. Your book of stamps? Well, you might . . . no, you won't! Your box of aspirin? Well, of course, if you got a headache . . . No, you just won't get one. Your fountain pen? . . . You reluctantly take it out. The kind of woman who would have a flat pocketbook is not the kind who would have a fountain pen. The same goes for pencils . . . keys . . . and your little roll of emergency string.

The nail file? Oh, you must leave that. And your powder . . . and rouge . . . and lipstick. Well, one thing you WILL get rid of is that fat roll of bills he gave you to pay things with. That goes OUT. Why should a woman be carrying money when she is going somewhere with a man?

• • • •

He looks you over approvingly as you go to the motor car. It is the bag—the flat, smart bag, you tell yourself. You feel very lighthearted, irresponsible and feminine as you ride away.

"Say, let me have a stamp," he says suddenly as you approach a mail box. "I forgot to mail a letter."

You explain that your stamps are at home. "But I thought you always carried some," he says reproachfully.

He stops at a drug store, draws out his letter and demands your fountain pen to put his address in the corner. "It's at home," you tell him. "Where's yours?"

His is at home, too. He thought you always carried one. He draws out a pencil, then puts it back. "Oh, well, I'll wait," he says, looking at you accusingly.

You ride a little further. "Give me an aspirin," he demands. Again you fail him. He drives on in disgruntled silence.

"Say, what was that address?" he asks suddenly.

"Haven't you got it?" you inquire surprised.

"No, I supposed you had it in your notebook."

Your notebook's at home, you inform him. His face reddens. "Of all the . . ."

He stops at a drug store to consult a telephone directory. "Give me a piece of paper so I can write it down," he commands as he alights. You look futilely in your neat, empty bag.

"Oh, well anything . . . just the back of something . . . like a bill."

Again you fail him. He strides testily toward the drug store rummaging in his pockets.

• • • •

You sense something is wrong as he returns. "Have you got a thread and needle?" he asks. You haven't.

"I burst a button off—just look at that!" You are sorry but you cannot help him.

You haven't either. He shuts his mouth tightly and you ride on in strained silence.

The car suddenly gets jerky. He turns into a filling station and grandly tells the attendant to "fill her up and check the oil." He rummages again in his pockets, turns to you helplessly. "Lend me a five, will you?"

You are sorry, but you haven't any money—with you.

"You haven't!" he storms. "Well, what HAVE you got?"

"A flat pocketbook," you reply sweetly.

the spirituals by a group of boys from an orphanage in Chattanooga, with B. Cortez Tipton as leader.

The sea chantey is not a growing part of the American folk picture, but there are still old sailors who sing them. Capt. Dick Maitland, a before-the-mast sailor from Snug Harbor, N. Y., sang the most popular of them all—"Blow the Man Down." Leo Reagan, of Connecticut joined him in a whaling song and in "Homeward Bound," a capstan chantey.

During the century following 1668, more than 100,000 Germans left the Rhine country near Switzerland and came to Pennsylvania. Soon, according to Dr. John Baer Stoudt, of Allentown, "they had the birds singing in Pennsylvania Dutch." Some of the songs they sang were repeated at the Festival by the Baer family, who won a big round of applause. A large painting typifying a Pennsylvania German farm of today was an attraction of the folk arts exhibit held in connection with the festival.

Tamburitzas Played.

The Slavonian music and dances by the tamburitza orchestra group from Duquesne University, at Pittsburgh, represented the wealth of South European music brought to America by more recent immigrants. The tamburitza is one of the oldest string instruments now in use.

Kentucky running sets presented under the direction of Edith Fitzpatrick James typified the intricacy of many of the square dance sets still used by Anglo-Saxon folk groups now being picked up for popular use in recreational programs at city playgrounds.

"An Evening at the Homesteads," by a group from Tygart Valley, W. Va., gaven another glimpse into the life of folk groups now in a new setting.

Cowboy songs were presented by Powder River Jack and his wife, Kitty Lee, who came to the festival from Kansas City in a special plane sent by Dr. L. S. Adams, president of the Tri-State Airways. Powder River Jack, reckoned by many the greatest cowboy ballad singer of them all, was due on the program Saturday night but got his time switched so he might accept an invitation to the Kentucky Derby. Flying back to Washington yesterday, the Adams plane had to fight through storms and the cowboy got to sing only on the evening program.

Rabbi Says Jews Are Ready to Help Save Democracy

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Rabbi Louis Levitzky, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., told a joint session of the United Synagogue of America and the Women's League of the organization today that "the history, the practice and the thinking of Jews since the creation of them, have never known anything but the love for practice of democracy."

The speaker said American democracy was calling for volunteers "to uphold its hands," and added "none is more reliable than the Jew—the Jew who knows his heritage, his history, and his hopes."

Greetings were received from Gov. Henry Horner, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, and from Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago at a dinner honoring Mrs. Benjamin Davis, of Chicago, founder of the Women's League and its honorary vice president.

Slay

The children—Edith, 9, and Nina, 6—were found chloroformed in their beds, their dolls in their arms.

Bunge, Bush said, told officers he and his wife had "talked it all over for a week, planning the deaths because of financial troubles.

"We tried to make the little girls as happy as possible in their last days," Bush read from a transcript of Bunge's statement. "We loved them. They were close to me and we wanted them to be happy. We did not have adequate food."

Bunge was quoted as saying he first chloroformed the children and then killed his wife.

"Mother and I planned to go together, but it couldn't be done," he said.

Bush said Bunge asserted he chloroformed his wife and then cut her throat.

"She didn't want it bungled. She asked me to put her in the bathtub and to turn on the water so there would be no slip, and she asked me to open her vein when she was under the chloroform. She only said 'I'll be sorry for you after I am gone.'"

While he and his wife sat meditating over their death scheme, Bunce said he wrote a poem, called "Silvery Moon," to the two children he had killed. It said:

"Tonight somewhere on high—beyond the blue
"Two little souls are bound for a rendezvous
"All alone——"

"I had always wanted to write something like that," he said. "It was the whole plan and all was carried out except as to myself."

After leaving his home, Bunge said, he wandered through unfamiliar country and got as far away from Tampa as Dade City, 40 miles distant. He came back, he said, when he read in newspapers that his son had arrived.

"I knew they would be looking all over creation," he declared. "I wanted to be found while my son was here. I wanted to get it all over with as soon as possible. I was planning to kill myself, and I wrote a note about my intentions."

Hopkins Denies Relief Waste in Reply to Hoover

ate a government for all the people and not just for a few? Is it dictatorship to guarantee the accounts of small depositors, and keep phoney stocks and bonds off the market? Is it dictatorship to save millions of homes from foreclosure? Is it dictatorship to give a measure of protection to millions who are economically insecure and jobs to other millions who can't find work? Is it dictatorship to try to put a floor under wages and a ceiling over working hours?"

Hopkins' speech was intended not only to combat criticism that relief spending will be used as a club over anti-New Deal Democrats up for re-election this fall, but was viewed as an attempt to placate some opponents of the Administration's new recovery program.

Charges that WPA workers are refusing to leave the Federal relief rolls to accept jobs in private industry have been thoroughly investigated and the number involved "is so small as to be insignificant," Hopkins said. He cautioned his listeners not to "mistake political fiction for fact."

Gives WPA Assets.

Hopkins then cited these "tangible assets" of WPA work: Completion of 43,000 miles of new roads and improvement of 116,000 miles; construction of 19,000 new bridges, 185,000 culverts, 105 new airports, 12,000 new schools and other public buildings, 8,000 parks and playgrounds, 15,000 small dams, 10,000 miles of water and sewer lines, planting of 10,000,000 trees and improvement of millions of acres of land.

Jobless WPA teachers have taught more than 1,000,000 American adults to read and write English, reducing illiteracy in this country almost one-fourth, Hapkins said. Women on WPA rolls have produced 85,000,000 garments for men, women and children who hadn't enough clothing; have served 128,000,000 hot school lunches to hungry children and renovated 30,000,000 library and school books.

Hopkins read from what he described as an impartial survey of WPA activities made by 10 national organizations in 42 States and said:

"I am proud to have been associated with millions of hard-pressed men and women who stepped from the relief rolls and wrought such a record of achievement—such a triumph of democracy—across the face of the country," he said.

Hopkins conceded that conditions today "are serious" but he said that people are not frightened as they were a few years ago. He gave credit for this calm to New Deal policies.

"No one in his right mind is suggesting that we divide up the present national income," he said. "It has to go up. And certainly I do not believe that Government spending can do the whole job. Without the traditional investment of private money in a rising economy there can be no permanent recovery."

peace structure and the general system of inter-American co-operation."

The President began his message by remarking on the fitness of sending the broadcast from the Pan-American Union Building, a symbol of international co-operation.

After reading the message, Secretary Hull said:

"The United States is making its contribution through the policy of negotiating reciprocal trade agreements. The people and the Government of the United States are determined to carry this policy vigorously forward.

"It is our firm conviction that there is not in the world today a more potent force making for economic well-being everywhere, for social stability within nations, and for durable peace among nations, than expanding international trade, functioning on the basis of mutual advantage, fair dealing and non-discriminatory treatment."

Bolivia Urges Tin Deal.

Hope of the Bolivian government that an agreement might be reached with the United States concerning Bolivia's supply of tin, vital peace and war-time material which this country has to import, was expressed by Luis Fernando Guachalla, Bolivian Minister here, in another address.

"Bolivia is the second producer of tin in the world, in spite of the fact that her mining industry is still in its early stages and awaiting the capital and the technical assistance from outside which will aid its more rapid development," the minister said.

He pointed out that the United States' dependence on foreign tin markets might make it difficult in an emergency to insure adequate supplies.

Guachalla said a solution would require, among other things, "efforts to overcome the resistance of vested interests."

Other Envoys Talk.

In another address, Dr. Ricardo Castro Beeche, minister from Costa Rica, urged greater economic co-operation between the Americas.

"The interchange of products between our countries, even when it is considerable, is still far from the amount that the interests of the continent demand," he said.

The Brazilian ambassador, Dr. Pimentel Brandao, called attention to the two committees, created by Brazil and the United States to observe the execution of the trade agreement between the two countries, and said of the action:

"Let us widen its organization and its field of application."

From Havana, Dr. Juan Ramos, Cuban foreign minister, said that of the ties between Cuba and the United States "those that will definitely and effectually bind the two nations together will be the economic co-operation between them."

Gerald Francis O'Neil, 35, son-in-law of F. L. Sandoz, realtor, died of illuminating gas in his apartment at 3432 Connecticut avenue northwest yesterday.

O'Neil was found unconscious on the floor of the living room, his head propped by pillows and his wife's picture beside him, by the apartment house janitor investigating an odor of gas. Five jets were open on a kitchen stove. He was dead by the time a doctor arrived.

Police found an unsigned note addressed to Mrs. Priscilla Sandoz O'Neil, the dead man's wife. The note read:

"Petie: I'm so tired—please love me. Write Tom; he'll pay all expenses. Tell dad and mother. I love you always."

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, assistant coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

O'Neil and his wife had been married only since September and he was employed in the office of his father-in-law. He was a native of Maine and a graduate of Boston University.

Seattle, May 8 (AP).—The C. I. O.-affiliated Cannery Workers and Farm Laborers Union today was certified by the National Labor Relations Board as winner in an election to determine jurisdiction over Alaska salmon cannery workers hired in Oregon and Washington.

Robert M. Gates, acting regional NLRB director, said the C. I. O. group polled 1,560 votes to 1,307 for the A. F. L. Cannery Workers Union. The election clears the way for the Oregon-Washington salmon fleet to sail for the fishing banks at once.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

An official of the American State Department has been circulating privately a little guidebook for dictators, for the amusement of his friends, which might come in handy to ambitious young Americans in a world no longer fit for Horatio Alger heroes:

Boss Hague. . . . Alger hero?

• • • •

If Boss Hague wanted to annex Staten Island, N. Y., to New Jersey, how should he proceed?

He should offer to give Long Island, which also belongs to New York, to Connecticut in exchange for it.

• • • •

When a dictator says that his troops will never go south of the Brenner Pass, what does he really mean?

He really means that he wants a harbor on the Adriatic, 100 miles south of Brenner Pass.

• • • •

If a dictator discovers that a certain railroad engineer has taken down the pictures of the dictator from his living room wall, what should he do?

He should accuse the engineer of sabotage for killing a cow that wandered out on the track.

"—a new kind of salute"

If a dictator wants to prove that he abhors the saluting and heiling of other dictators, what on earth can he do?

He can invent a new kind of salute, in which the leg instead of the arm is extended high above the head.

• • • •

When a dictator wants to make a few lies look good, what should he do?

He should call them a "new ideology."

• • • •

When a dictator goes broke buying cannon and is forced by his people's hunger pains to buy them bacon, how ought he to go about it?

He should fly bombing planes over a neighboring state and then offer to trade applejack and pogo-sticks for the bacon.

• • • •

If you wanted to annex a piece of Switzerland populated by contented Swiss, what would be the ideological course to follow?

Make a speech calling the contented Swiss "part of our blood and sinew," and then send ideologists to convince them that they are discontented.

• • • •

If you were a dictator and one of your aviators got lost flying over the North Pole, how would you improve your people's morale?

By accusing him of sabotage—if you could find him.

• • • •

If a dictator wants to prove that he is not sending soldiers to interfere in another country's civil war, what is the best way?

To send more shiploads of soldiers, and to pin medals on the returning wounded.

"—gifts from a dictator"

• • • •

If you were Stalin, and thought one of your trusted officials might not want to return from a trip outside Russia, how would you make sure that he'd come home?

By making him leave his wife and children in Russia.

• • • •

Just suppose you wanted to annex all or part of Czechoslovakia, but were annoyed and delayed because that country had an alliance with France and Russia. How should you handle the situation?

By warning Czechoslovakia that you deemed the alliance unfriendly, and asking her to cancel it as a friendly gesture.

• • • •

Assume for the moment you are Mussolini; your people are vaguely unhappy. What's the next step?

To make a speech scolding the fat, comfortable democracies.

• • • •

What did Herr Hitler mean when he said to his Reichstag, on January 30, 1934: "As to the other claim of the Austrian government saying that Germany is attempting, or even as much as comtemplating, some sort of aggression against the Austrian state, I must decidedly repudiate such an idea?"

He meant business.

Maybe Hitler and Mussolini polished up the technique the other day.

Frederick Nears Goal In Charity Chest Drive

Frederick, Md., May 8 (AP).—Solicitors in Frederick's first Community Chest campaign said today they are confident the quota of $1...250 will be raised early this week.

Subscriptions yesterday totaled $5,013.65, bringing the workers within grasp of their goal. Dr. Ignatius Bjorlee, campaign chairman, said.

Children Give $5,000 Fund For Missions

2,000 Attend Service at Cathedral, Led by 39 Clergymen.

Breakdown in Home and School Blamed for Social Trouble.

Nearly 2,000 children from Sunday schools of the District and neighboring parishes of Maryland crowded into Washington Cathedral in colorful services yesterday to present to Bishop James E. Freeman a Lenten collection of more than $5,000 for foreign and domestic missions.

Many of them clad in red and blue cassocks with white surplices, the youngsters filed into the Cathedral behind 39 clergymen of the diocese, the Cathedral clergy and 20 flagbearers whose banners indicated the worldwide extent of missionary work.

Bishop Freeman, standing at the top of the transept steps, received the presentation from 209 young delegates. The other children—more than 1,700—were choir singers from Sunday schools.

Essay Prizes Awarded.

In a sermon, Bishop Freeman explained to the children the significance of the newly installed Canterbury pulpit, on which are carved representations of historical figures connected with the translation and revision of the English Bible.

Bishop Freeman presented prizes to winners of an essay contest on the value of missionary work. Recipients were: Class I, Mary Ann Thompson, Marion McLean and Ernest Davis; Class II, Evelyn Land, Sally Desscz, Carvel Blair and Alec Hedquist.

The Rev. William R. Moody, rector of St. Mark's Church, read the lesson. The service was sponsored by the Missionary Education Committee of the Department of Religious Education, of which Miss Frances Withers is chairman. Canon Edward S. Dunlap was in charge of arrangements.

Home Breakdown Hit.

Breakdowns in home stability and in public education are the chief causes of the difficult social situation in the United States, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder declared yesterday at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation.

Dr. Blackwelder attributed lack of stability in the home to an increasing divorce rate, city congestion, removal from private homes to apartments and commercialized amusements. The fact that children now leave home to seek employment, that some members of the family work in the day and others at night and that education is now conceived as job-training rather than as a means of acquiring general culture were among the other causes cited by Dr. Blackwelder.

He pleaded for parents to make home life adequate and attractive, so that "even if young people must be out of school and out of work, they at least might not be out of home."

Pastor Invites Criticism.

Asserting that "Protestantism does does not shrink from criticism," Dr. J. O. Knott declared that "the government and the church are both getting weary of deliverances on shortcomings from persons who present no constructive programs."

Addressing an audience at Cleveland Park Congregational Church, Dr. Knott said that "our church organizations that claim the right of liberal speech are ready to give that right to their critics."

Mount Vernon M. E. Church.

Modern parents talk too much in front of their children about "the breakdown of American life," Dr. John W. Rustin, patsor of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, declared.

"Observatons of that sort weigh heavily on children," Dr. Rustin said. "They rob children of their sense of security."

N. Y. Avenue Presbyterian.

The 507th anniversary of the death of Joan of Arc was observed at yesterday's French service at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, at which the Rev. G. Bordreuil was guest speaker.

The Rev. Bordreuil characterized the Maid of Orleans as one of the purest manifestations of the spirit of God, ranking with the world's great Christian characters. Her genius, he said, lay in her obedience to the spiritual power of her faith.

The Rev. Bordreuil, formerly secretary of the Protestant churches of Alsace-Lorraine, was introduced by the Rev. A. F. Liotard, pastor of the local French congregation.

Sleepwalker Escapes Serious Hurts in Fall

Mrs. Mary Frances Mann, 71-year-old sleepwalker, escaped serious injury last night when she plunged 20 feet to the ground from a porch roof of her home at 5712 Georgia avenue northwest. She was admitted to Sibley Hospital for treatment for bruises and shock.

Police said that the woman, an inveterate somnambulist, climbed through a window to the roof. Because of her habit of walking in her sleep, all other windows in the house had been fastened to prevent her from climbing out.

Swedenborg's Policies Urged Upon Church

Cantata Is High Light of New Jerusalem Convention Services.

Three hundred delegates and visitors at the general convention of the New Jerusalem religious sect yesterday took note of the sixth day of the assembly in attending special services at the Church of the Holy City.

The guest preacher at the morning service was the Rev. S. J. C. Goldsack, former president of the New Church in Great Britain, who voiced a plea for the carrying out of Emanuel Swedenborg's perception of the "tree of life" in daily living to insure happiness.

This perception, he said, is "an internal sensation communicated by the Lord as a means of discerning the true and the good."

At the same service the Rev. George H. Dole, general pastor of the Maryland Conference, participated in the rite of investing his son, the Rev. Lewis Dole, into the office of general pastor of the Maine Conference. Other assisting clergymen were the Rev. F. Sidney Mayer, of Baltimore, president of the New Church in America; the Rev. Paul Sperry, pastor of the National Church; the Rev. Arthur Hoeck, of Cincinnati; the Rev. H. J. C. Goldsack, and the Rev. Arthur Wilde, of New York City. Eight delegates served as ushers in the service of Holy Communion.

In the afternoon a chorus from New Churches in nearby cities gave a rendition of the cantata—"The Glorified Christ"—which was written by Hollo F. Maitland in commemoration of Swedenborg's birth 250 years ago. Louis A. Potter conducted.

The evening service opened with a recording of the sermon—"He was Born Too Soon"—a sketch of Swedenborg's life which was broadcast January 29 to mark the great philosopher's anniversary.

Beginning at 8 o'clock, a service was held in the auditorium, under auspices of the Board of Home and Foreign Missions. Speakers included the Rev. William R. Reece, of Portland, Oreg.; the Rev. Samuel O. Weems, of Cambridge, Mass.; the Rev. Leslie Marshall, of Paterson, N. J.; the Rev. Charles Hermann Kingsley and Miss Margaret K. Montere, missionary from Anking, China, who pronounced the benediction in Chinese.

There has been placed in the rare book room of the Library of Congress a collection of the early works of Swedenborg. The first Bishop of the New Sweden was Jasper Swedborg, father of Emanuel and author of a volume concerning the Swedish settlements and churches in Pennsylvania and Delaware, printed in 1732. A copy of this book is in the collection.

Law-Business Report Drafted

A joint committee, representing legal and insurance business interests, met yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel to begin preparation of a report on the question of where the work of the businessman ends and that of the lawyer begins.

Their study, which will be presented to the American Bar Association in Cleveland in July, was started after lawyers' groups had contested the right of businessmen to carry out certain practices bordering on legal work. According to a spokesman of the insurance group, these practices include filling in blanks on contracts and settling claims and disputes.

McCaffrey Horses Win.

Westminister, Md., May 8 (AP).—Golden Staff and Brown Man, horses owned by E. H. McCaffrey, of Westminster, took top honors today in a horse show sponsored by the Westminster Riding Club. Approximately 300 persons, including Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, one of the six Democratic gubernatorial candidates, attended the show. O'Conor did not speak.

Historic Fleet Idea Revived By Roosevelt

Sight of Farragut's Ship Again Suggests Plan for Tidal Basin.

Memorials to Nation's Sea Victories Would Include 4 Vessels.

The long dormant proposal to moor several historic warships in the Tidal Basin as monuments to the Nation's victories afloat was revived yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The President, aboard the cruiser Philadelphia at Charleston, S. C., noticed the now decrepit Hartford, flagship of Admiral Farragut and suggested it as one of the ships which might be placed in the memorial fleet. The Constitution and the Constellation also have been projected for the purpose.

Yesterday the President saw the freshly painted Hartford and expressed pleasure in seeing the gallant old veteran returned to assemblence of her former glory. The frigate Constitution several years ago was completely restored, chiefly with funds contributed by school children.

The President also suggested to newspapermen it might be a good idea to raise the old "fish boat" the Confederacy's submarine with which it attempted to break the Union blockade, and place it with the others. The submarine lies on the sea bottom off Fort Moultrie, near Charleston.

Mr. Roosevelt first indicated interest in the project of mooring the historic vessels here in May, 1936, when he indorsed the project.

His Family Sees Transit Engineer Die at Car Wheel

Joseph Henry Dierken, 49, engineer in charge of electrical work for the Capital Transit Co., died of heart disease at the wheel of his automobile about 6 p. m. yesterday near Lanham, Md., on the Defense highway.

Mr. Dierken, who lived at 2224 Hall place northwest, was returning from Annapolis with his wife, Mrs. Helen Dierken, and daughters, Anne, 16, and Betty, 13. Mrs. Dierken, who was riding beside him in the front seat, said he apparently felt something was wrong and pulled the car toward the side of the road. It ran into a dirt bank and stopped.

Mrs. Dierken took the wheel and drove her husband into Washington. He was pronounced dead by Dr. E. Stewart Lyddane.

Mrs. Dierken said they had gone to Annapolis to bring home their daughter, Anne, who had attended a dance there the night before.

Husband Slashed, Wife Is Questioned

Walter Muir, 26, was slashed on the arm with scissors in an argument with his wife last night in their apartment at 928 M street northwest.

Muir, an employe of the Giant Food Stores, was taken to Casualty Hospital. His wife was taken to the Second Precinct Station for questioning.

According to neighbors, a second woman was in the apartment. She attempted to aid as peacemaker.

Hospital attendants said Muir did not appear seriously wounded.

Alley Authority Marking Time In Housing Row

Ihlder to Confer With Roosevelt on Changes Urged by Straus.

Opponents in the approaching fight over policies within the Alley Dwelling Authority marked time yesterday waiting the return of President Roosevelt from his Southern fishing trip.

John Ihlder, executive officer of the authority, said last night he had an appointment with the President, but would not know when it would be until Mr. Roosevelt's return. He had been accused by Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, of delays which might result in deferring for a year a $10,000,000 low-rent and slum-clearance project here.

Ihlder said he would discuss with the President a group of amendments to the Alley Dwelling act. These amendments, proposed by Straus would, Straus said, "enable Washington to participate generously" in a new Federal housing program.

Federal Aid For Schools Is Held Likely

Dr. Davis Calls It 'Almost Certain' as Parley Here Closes.

Green, Lewis Approve Bill in Messages to Meeting.

Dr. Jerome Davis, chairman of the National Conference on Federal Aid to Education, predicted at the last session of the conference yesterday almost certain passage of the Harrison-Fletcher bill, now pending in the Senate, to grant the states Federal funds for education.

Davis declared that "there is probably no measure before the country where so many divergent elements representing so many million people have united on any program." He said that the American Federation of Labor, the Committee for Industrial Organization, the railway brotherhoods, farm groups and teachers were all united in support of the bill.

Representative Henry G. Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, promised to back the measure but warned delegates that if Federal funds were appropriated they must be administered without discrimination against racial or religious groups. At present, he said, educational facilities are not as available to colored persons in the Southern States and to residents of rural areas as they are to those in the cities.

Both William Green and John L. Lewis announced approval of the bill in messages read at the meeting. The Lewis message was read by Thomas Kennedy, secretary of the United Mine Workers of America.

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, declared at the meeting that his organization was supporting the program because it was "in the habit of being in the vanguard in the educational movement."

Simone Simon Creates Vogue Of Golden Key

Sultry Young Actress Is Harassed by Results of Court Action.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, May 8 (U.P.).—While jewelers were worked overtime turning out golden keys, practical and otherwise, for those who would follow the piquant example of Miss Simone Simon, the biggest question on the lips of her movie actress sisters today was:

"Who got the 18-carat keys to her chaste white door?"

Simone, who paid $35 for the two keys, $185 for a silken robe and $11 for a pair of leather slippers as gifts to a friend, wasn't telling. She wasn't even mentioning the sex of the friend who can walk into her house whenever he—or is it she?—pleases.

Neither would she say why she presented her friend with two keys to the same door, though jewelers reported that a golden key inserted into a Yale lock soon becomes so badly worn it won't work.

Simone, whose Hollywood career has been as tempestuous as her early life in Madagascar was mysterious, would talk only of the fact that Hollywood seems to presume that she, rather than the secretary she charged with forgery, is on trial in Los Angeles Superior Court.

Not Being Tried.

"Eet ees so unfair," wailed the red-lipped Simone, running a thin white hand through her curly brown hair, and casting down her eyes, which have been classified by experts as sultry. "I am not the roober. I stole nothing. I am not being tried in court. But zees rumors! Zey are driving me crazee."

The rumors came in a regular stream from Miss Sandra Martin, perched upon a cot at city jail, where she is staying in lieu of $10,000 bail. Miss Martin, known to police in other cities by a variety of names, functioned as Miss Simon's secretary until the latter charged her with theft and forgery. Having threatened to "blow the lid off Hollywood" and having told stories about her former employer so uncomplimentary as to be libelous, Miss Martin succeeded at a preliminary court hearing to get entered into the record the fact that Miss Simon ordered her to buy the two golden keys, the brocaded robe and the soft slippers "for a friend."

Admitted Too Much.

In a flurry of near-hysterical admissions Miss Simon admitted all. She even admitted too much. When she got home she discovered that she'd given the keys to her friend, all right, but that she still had the robe and the slippers.

The arraignment of Miss Martin is scheduled for May 18. Miss Simon, resting between pictures at Twentieth Century-Fox, is staying alone in her white-walled mansion in West Los Angeles, except for her cook, her maid, her chauffeur, and presumably the owner of the golden keys. This person of unrevealed sex can walk in at will, unless, of course, both keys by now are worn out.

The whole imbroglio is a pain in the statuesque neck of Simone, who wishes that she'd never sued her secretary, but who can't halt the proceedings now. Neither is l'affaire of the keys making her studio any too happy. Only jubilation is in the back rooms of jewelry shops all over the country, where a sudden influx of orders for custom-made keys is helping the unemployment situation in the goldsmith trade.

She "Started Something."

New York jewelers are pricing such keys of purest gold at $25 each, with a discount for orders in half-dozen lots. Jewelers elsewhere are charging other prices for keys which work, and—for the timid—those which don't.

One Hollywood jeweler said he'd sold more keys than wedding rings during the past week. Another, the one who made the two for Miss Simon, said he had sold "many" golden keys to Hollywood celebrities.

Simone Simon started something.

Trans-Lux

Two vital and timely episodes compose the March of Time issue at the Trans-Lux Theater this week. Friday night's capacity audiences went for them in a big way.

"Nazi Conquest, No. 1" continues the narrative of Hitler's Austrian coup and entrance into Vienna. "Crime and Prisons," equally important, emphasies the problem of salvaging the human wreck.

"Air College," another short, very interestingly depicts the progressive training routine of a student at the United States Army training school at Randolph Field, Tex.

There is an abundance of news this week, with much of human interest. There are remarkable pictures of the Japs bombing the Hangkow Railway and their continuing to rain death on China; of an air show at St. Gearmain, France; the United States Navy testing submarine lifesaving equipment; ox wagons in Australia driven to some depth into a high surf to load wool on conveying boats; the beautiful Cloisters, presented to New York City by Rockefeller; the Wellesley Seniors in their hoop-rolling race, and the Hohenzollern-Romanoff wedding.

Senators Copeland and Vandenberg make the screen with statements urging financial support for the G-Men; also John Lewis, William (A.F.L.) Green, George Davis, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and Charles H. March, of the Federal Trade Commission, with statements on the present labor and industrial status, and what should be done.

Metropolitan

Two Academy award winners appear in the costellar roles of "Bordertown," the Warner Brothers production which was brought back to the screen of the Metropolitan Theater on Saturday to supplant "There's Always a Woman." They are Paul Muni and Bette Davis. That should give some indication of the type of acting that may be expected in this subject.

The story of "Bordertown" is pretty strong meat. It deals with raw passions, violent loves and hatreds and the sinister item of revenge. Mr. Muni is cast as a young law student, who can't quite make the grade and so becomes a partner in a Mexican border gambling casino, where his intelligence and resourcefulness soon put him on top.

His partner's wife, played by Miss Davis, falls in love with him, while he is falling in love with Dale Elwell, impersonated by Margaret Lindsay. Murder comes out of all of this and a climax to the picture that is as full of suspense as it is of morbidity.

Supporting the principal players already named are Gavin Gordon, Arthur Stone, Robert Barrat, Soledad Jiminez, Eugene Pallette, William Davidson, Robert Cavanaugh, Henry O'Neill, Vivian Tobin and Nella Walker.

The bill is augmented by short subjects and a new issue of the full, composite newsreel.

Little

"Maytime" is brought back to the Little Theater this week as chief feature of the bill which was inaugurated yesterday.

Based on the original operetta by Rida Johnson Young and Sigmund Romberg, this delightful bit of melodized screen romance affords Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy one of the most perfect vehicles they have had under the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer banner. It relates an interesting and, at times, melodramatic story that involves the career of a famous singer who falls unsuspectingly in love and that incurs the violent displeasure of the impresario who has fostered her career from its beginning and feels a little of the gentler sentiment himself toward his star. This role is played with complete effectiveness by John Barrymore, who can be either comedian or villain, at will.

Among those of prominence in the supporting cast are such artists as Herman Bing, Tom Brown, Lynne Carver, Rafaela Ottiano, Charles Judels, Paul Porcasi, Sig Rumann, Walter Kingsford and Guy Bates Post.

The bill is completed by the customary short subjects and picturized events of the past week.

Gayety

"BROWN SKIN MODELS." Irving C. Miller presents the musical production in two acts and 22 scenes, featuring Tanya and Jesse James, supported by Blanche Williams, Alta Oates, George Williams, Gladys Ridley, Dewey Moon, Ernest Seals, Three Speed Kings and Al Stewart's Swing Band. Dances devised by Irving C. Miller. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John.

After one of its most successful seasons of burlesque, the Gayety Theater rings down the final curtain this week with an all-colored revue that comes directly from one of Harlem's real hot spots.

This array of sepia entertainers furnish some fine entertainment, offering not only clever dancing, good singing and witty comedy, but boasting an orchestra whose popular songs are presented in manner which only these dusky boys from Lenox Avenue are capable of apprehending.

Two of the outstanding features on the program are Tanya and Jesse James. The former is a copper-colored damsel whose gyrations and acrobatic dancing we've never quite seen equalled on the Gayety stage, while the youthful Jesse James entertains with his amazing crutch dance, a number which has no parallel anywhere.

George Williams and Ernest Seals, with the capable assistance of Dewey Moon, offer some amusing comedy skits.

The Three Speed Kings present some nifty dance steps, while a line of fast-moving sepia choristers make their musical routines a pleasure to watch. Last, but by no means least, Al Stewart's Swing Band, which plays from the stage, offer some sweet and hot music that will make all the "jitterbugs" in attendence want to dance in the aisles.

Olympe Bradna Has Fine Film Vehicle; Drama and Music Are Artfully Blended

Preview Discloses Another Expert Welding of Classics and Melodrama; Miss Bradna Arrives Thursday; Gaumont British Announces Program; a Week Clogged With 'Dates;' Notes of the Theater.

BELL.

IN "Stolen Heaven," Paramount has concocted one of its better screen fables to signalize the elevation to stardom of that rarely gifted young actress, Olympe Bradna, who made so deep an impression playing opposite George Raft—with Gary Cooper starred—in "Souls at Sea." Miss Bradna, in that picture, it will be recalled, was the young woman who drowned, emotionally clasped in Mr. Raft's arms as the boat went under. She does not die in "Stolen Heaven;" she merely goes to jail, with a fine prospect of early release, if a few words of the burgomaster's, spoken near the end of the picture, mean anything.

It is a peculiar combination of dramatic elements that one encounters in "Stolen Heaven," which was previewed by a considerable invited audience in Loew's Capitol Theater last Saturday midnight. The pivotal characters are two young jewel thieves, masquerading as a dancer and musician, and a former concert pianist, who has been done in by the years. The band of criminals find hostage in the forest home of Langauer, the great virtuoso, where they attempt another hoax by pretending to be victims of an accident on the road and in a position to restore the maestro to his former eminence. The police are hot on their trail, the while. How this all comes out is both dramatically and emotionally intense—and that is as much of the blueprint as will be revealed at the present writing.

The point is that "Stolen Heaven" amalgamates in uncommonly clever fashion the melodramatic elements of police drama and the contrasting beauty of fine music. It is no claptrap that Paramount has injected into Miss Bradna's first starring vehicle as a basis of its musical appeal. The musical interludes have been chosen from the masters—Strauss, Liszt, Chopin, Grieg and Moszkowski.

Furthermore, the picture has been so fashioned that music is an integral and an essential part of its dramatic development—just as was the case in "The Girl Said No" and "One Hundred Men and a Girl." It is an extremely deft piece of work and will be shown on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater beginning Friday.

But there are two things that puzzle me. I would like to know if the talented Miss "O-Lamp" Bradna does her own singing and if Lewis S. Stone really can play the piano. I doubt both, but am open to argument, persuasion and, perhaps, conviction.

At any rate, Miss Bradna seems to do some very competent singing and Mr. Stone's fingers on the keyboard seem to be playing the numbers that are heard. If that was Mr. Stone playing, he has been wasting his time on the screen. He might just as well have been another Paderewski or Rachmaninoff!

My only fear is that "Stolen Heaven" will prove a little too good for what is popularly—or unpopularly—referred to as "mass consumption."

In connection with this booking, of course, it should not be overlooked that the 17-year-old Miss Olympe Bradna will arrive in Washington on Thursday, to be feted, toured, pestered by the press and whatnot, prior to her personal appearances in conjunction with the showing of the picture on Friday. It is my understanding that she will be in the Capital only the two days. That hardly seems long enough, considering the beauty, the talent and the ingenuous charm this young artist displays in her first starring role. I think all of us would like to get a little better acquainted with her than that.

That eminent bon vivant, Mr. Joseph Kaliski, Washington manager for Gaumont British Pictures, favors me with a pretentious prospectus of his company's American output for the season of 1938-1939. It is an expansive brochure, packed with promising portents.

The complete program of G. B. for American release will embrace 22 feature pictures, which already have been budgeted at a total cost of $12,000,000. Mr. Kaliski, however, assures me that this sum will be indefinitely expanded when the need arises. When any of the 22 productions go into work, if it is found that additional financial requirements must be met to insure the fullest measure of worth to the given picture, the money will be "on the line," as we say in the back room.

Also included in the announcement is the statement that the Gaumont British program for the new year will include two reissues. This seems to be wholly justified since the films scheduled for a new lease on life are Jessie Matthews in "Evergreen" and Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll in "The Thirty-nine Steps." Both of these were unequivocal hits.

The complete list of prospective releases, necessarily, is too long to reproduce here en toto, but a recitation of the principal stars who will be seen in this company's productions might squeeze in. They comprise a roster of such names as Jessie Matthews, Anna Neagle, Will Fyffe—now to be seen at the Belasco in "To the Victor"—Nova Pilbeam, Margaret Lockwood—also in "To the Victor"—Jack Whiting, Margot Grahame, Kent Taylor, Paul Lukas, Roland Young and Edgar Kennedy.

They will be directed by such experts as Alfred Hitchcock, Robert Stevenson and Herbert Wilcox, in plays by such authors as Edgar Wallace, Sir Walter Scott, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Henry De Vere Stacpoole, Alfred Ollivant and Roy Vickers.

What more could you want?

The week is beginning to clog up a bit. "Star-Wagon," as goes without saying, opens in the National tonight; there is a screening of "The Adventures of Marco Polo," starring Gary Cooper, with Sigrid Gurie, tomorrow at 1:30; tomorrow night the Variety Club is tossing a cocktail party and banquet for that famous columnist, with Vice President and Mrs. John N. Garner, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, J. Edgar Hoover, the District Commissioners, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, Col. and Mrs. Marvin H. McIntyre, Maj. and Mrs. Ernest W. Brown and other notables among the guests, and on the same night the Warner officials are cocktailing and dining the press at Harvey's, preliminary to a preview screening of "The Adventures of Robin Hood," to take place later in the Earle's private projection room; Thursday, comes Olympe Bradna, in person.

That Tuesday night business poses what might conservatively be termed a problem. The inexorable laws of Nature being what they are, how does a fellow manage to be in two places at the same time? Yeah, I know; I should worry, not you!

The Theater Guild announces that plans for the formation of an Acting Company are under way for next season. This company will appear in two of the Guild's regular subscription productions. The personnel of the company and the plays to be presented by it now are being selected by the officers of the Guild.

Worthington Miner will direct both plays and Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner will serve as the Guild's production committee—just as they have for so many other Guild offerings seen in Washington.

The Guild first organized an Acting Company in 1926 and the following season formed a Repertory Company that toured the country for two seasons. Both companies enjoyed considerable success and it was only because many of their members migrated to the films that they finally were abandoned. Now one of them is to be revived—which is a hopeful sign.

"Ship ahoy, mates!" yells Harry Baker. For why? Because the Potomac River cruise season will get under way on Thursday of this week, May 12, when the Wilson Line steamer City of Washington will sail for Mount Vernon at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., and then launch the moonlight excursion season by taking off from the Seventh street wharf and steaming down to there and back. The Washington Junior Board of Commerce sponsors this initial trip—the night one. Music for dancing again will be furnished by Sidney's orchestra, under the conductorship of Russ Cullen.

Meteorological Note.

Has spring really gotten that far along? I hadn't noticed, except that my collars are beginning to wilt.

Stars Come Over the Horizon

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, May 8.

ART DEPT.: A Fort Worth art instructor distributed some modeling clay among the young students of the class, and suggested that they mold the clay into whatever forms they'd prefer . . . A ten-year-old boy set to work—and molded the figure of a nude woman cast upon a rock . . . The astonished teacher stared at the nude, and asked the pupil: "Where did you ever learn to do that?" . . . "Oh, I dunno," the lad shrugged. "I just made it" . . . "What's your name?" the boy was asked . . . "Eugene Beck," he informed. "My sister is Sally Rand."

• • • •

BUSINESS DEPT.: A firm of mattress manufacturers on Chestnut street in Philadelphia styles itself "Doctors of Sleep." The proprietor is Louis J. Odets, father of Clifford Odets . . . The senior Odets has just published a new catalogue describing his wares, and called upon Clifford to help make the catalogue readable . . . The proletarian playwright therefore contributed one phrase to this mattress catalogue—a proletarian phrase, reading: "Civilization harrasses people . . ."

• • • •

THEATER DEPT.: Eugene O'Neill, who now is writing a series of nine plays which will be completed by 1940, already has definite plans about their production . . . The Theater Guild will not be the producers. O'Neill plans to come to New York, hire his own cast of 50, sign them to a 4-year contract, and employ them as part of his O'Neill Repertory.

• • • •

• • • •

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: Chairman Walsh, of the board of higher education, who was recently appointed by Mayor LaGuardia to succeed Mark Eisner, who resigned, will not accept that office . . . The news will be announced shortly. The Mayor will appoint another in his stead.

• • • •

FASHIONS DEPT.: Lucius Beebe was in San Francisco recently, and at 8:30 a. m. met Charles Paine, vice president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce . . . Beebe was wearing tan boots, orange-colored riding breeches, checkered jacket, yellow scarf and a green monogrammed camera case under his arm . . . "Lucius, dear Lucius," Paine greeted, "why are you going horseback riding in San Francisco at 8:30 in the morning?" . . . "I am not going horseback riding." Beebe explained. "I had this outfit made especially for my taking photographs of locomotives. I'm on my way to the roundhouse."

• • • •

EMILY POST DEPT.: At 3:30 a. m., Arturo Ramos, former husband of Millicent Rogers, threatened to break a columnist's head if this story were printed: At midnight Ramos had brought a young lady into El Morocco. Another girl, seated at a nearby table, noticed Ramos and his companion, and tossed three glasses—which broke—in their direction. She then started to hurl a plate at them, was stopped, and rushed from the club . . . "Don't you print this," the 6-foot-4 Argentinian threatened, "or I'll break your head . . . Newspapermen are the worst people in the world . . . A man tries to be a gentleman, and they won't let him . . . They wreck women's careers for a story" . . . The plate-thrower returned to the club. And Mr. Ramos, who protests that he wants to be a gentleman, escorted her home—leaving behind him the young lady whom he had brought . . . Mr. Ramos ain't no gentleman.

• • • •

FINANCE DEPT.: Last year Raymond Sprigle, of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, exposed the Ku Klux Klan membership of the newly appointed Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black . . . The Nation published an article allegedly revealing how Sprigle came to write that expose. As a result Sprigle brought suit for libel, claiming damages to his reputation as a reporter. That suit is still pending . . . When the suit comes to trial the plaintiff will find himself in a strange position—insisting that the story damaged his reputation . . . and yet subsequent to its publication the Pulitzer Prize committee gave him the award.

SPORTS DEPT.: Sam H. Harris, who produced "Of Mice & Men," has seen Author John Steinbeck only once . . . just before the play opened. Harris, who once managed Terrible Terry McGovern, noted Steinbeck's massive build, and sighed: "Never mind the play. I'd like to match you against Joe Louis" . . . Last week, when the play won the Critics' Circle Prize, Steinbeck wired Harris: "Never mind all this. What I'd like you to do now is—get me some fights."

In Hollywood With Hedda Hopper

Holywood, Cal., May 8.—My New York morning started at 9 o'clock when two friends came for coffee.

The telephone never stopped ringing until I left for luncheon at the Rainbow Room, that delightful place, 65 stories up, in Radio City. By the way, don't leave New York until you've gotten a glimpse of the city from that terrace. But with all its magnificent man-made beauty, I wouldn't trade it for my Hollywood hilltop, which looks out over miles of little white bungalows, orange groves, marble palaces and the broad Pacific.

HEDDA HOPPER.

At the table there were writers, stylists, publicists and publishers.

Alice Hughes wanted to know what kind of flowered jacket Ina Claire had promised me. I asked how she knew. She said, "I ran into Ina last night and she said, 'I hear Hopper's in town—I owe her a jacket. Tell her I'll give it to her.'"

But I haven't got it yet.

Tobe, who knows as much about fashion as any woman in America, graced the head of the table.

Exchanged laughs with Leonard Hall, movie critic. Also a cartoonist from the New Yorker.

Walked from there to Broadway to see my old friend, Robert Rubin, vice president of M. G. M. When I came to Loew's Theater, I thought it was on fire. But found it was only Mae West warming up the patrons. Heard she was taking $18,000 weekly! Which proves people still have money for what they want.

Ran into Lynn Fontanne, now on her way, with Alfred Lunt, to do eight weeks of "Amphitryon 38" in London. She was so emphatic about eight, I repeated it, and she said, "Well, maybe only one; they may not like us there."

I asked about Gertie Lawrence. Lynn said, "Oh, she was poisoned the other day."

"What," I explained, "hasn't she learned not to eat fish?" Lynn said, "No, hyacinths. Hedda, wouldn't you love to be poisoned by hyacinths?"

Then to the Ritz for a spot of tea with the George Camerons, of San Francisco Chronicle. With them to the Waldorf to cocktail party for Mrs. Roosevelt, who flew from Washington to sell her column, too.

I heard a woman say to a beautiful blonde, "If I hadn't known her all her life, I would say you were Hope Hampton 20 years ago."

Federal Taxes Last Year 2.7 Times 1933

Public's 1937 Payments 1,232 Billion Over Previous Year.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 8.—The public paid $1,232,000,000 more in taxes to the Federal Government in 1937 than in 1936, and almost three times as much in 1933, according to figures released today by the National Industrial Conference Board.

Despite this tax increase of more than one billion dollars, the country entered 1938 with a gap of approximately $3,000,000,000 representing the difference between tax collections and Government expenditures, the survey shows.

Tax collections for 1937 are shown as $5,143,000,000, for 1936 as $3,911,000,000, and for 1933 as $1,874,000,000.

Government expenditures in 1937, according to the report, were $8,261,000,000, on a basis that excludes loans and subscriptions to capital stock and surplus.

Revenue classifications showing the greatest increases were income taxes and other internal revenue taxes. Income taxes increased $1,402,000,000 between 1933 and 1937. Internal revenue taxes not otherwise classified increased $665,000,000. In this group are found some of the many "hidden" taxes against which consumer organizations are protesting. These taxes, representing 21 per cent of total collections, have increased from $427,000,000 in 1933 to $1,092,000,000.

Liquor Taxes 12 Per Cent.

Taxes on liquor amounted to $594,000,000 in 1937, according to the report, and accounted for 12 per cent of the total collections. Tobacco taxes totaled 11 per cent, or $552,000,000; social security, 5 per cent, or $266,000,000, and customs taxes, 10 per cent, or $490,000,000.

The Government's regular operating expense accounted for 45 per cent of all expenditures—amounting to $3,746,000,000, according to the report. Federal relief reached $2,467,000,000, amounting to 30 per cent of total expenditures; public works, $1,079,000,000, or 13 per cent; the agricultural adjustment program, $516,000,000, or 6 per cent.

Since 1932, the report points out, three new general classifications have been added to Federal expenditures. They are relief, social security and agricultural adjustment. A total of 42 per cent of Federal expenditures in 1937 was used for these three classifications.

Pan Am. Airways Nets 37c a Share

New York, May 8 (AP).—Pan American Airways reported a net profit of $510,446, equal to 37 cents a share, for the year 1937, compared with $955,352, or 70 cents a share, in 1936. In his annual report to stockholders, Juan T. Trippe, president, pointed out that despite record traffic gains in all departments, increased operating expenses resulted in a decreased profit. Gross income for the year, Trippe said, increased to $14,729,412, a gain of $3,811,869 over 1936, but operating expenses increased at a greater rate to $14,218,995.

T. & W. Air.

Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., reported today a net loss of $590,079 for the first quarter of 1938. This compares with a net loss of $359,933 for the corresponding quarter last year. Total operating revenues for the first quarter amounted to $1,161,822, an increase of $88,407 over the same period last year, the company reported, but operating expenses increased by $306,492.

Curtiss-Wright.

Guy W. Vaughan, president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, manufacturers of airplanes and airplane parts, reported today first quarter earnings of $733,910, equal before provision for possible Federal tax on undistributed profits to 63 cents a share on the class "A" stock, compared with $269,251, or 23 cents a share on the class "A" the first quarter of 1937. Vaughan said earnings in the first quarter were the best in the company's history.

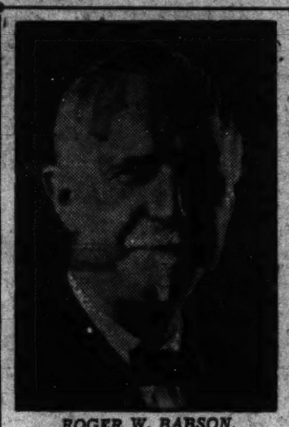
15,000,000 Farm Families Are Facing Serious Problem

Prices of Farm Products Have Dropped 30 Per Cent, Says Babson, While Goods He Must Buy Are Down Only 6 Per Cent.

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., May 8.—The recession is now stretching out through the rural areas of America. Up until several months ago the farm communities were not suffering from the recession so severely as the shut-down industrial centers. We are now entering a new farm season. Prospects indicate a mammoth winter wheat crop. Taking this as a barometer, the other crops should also be large, granted good growing conditions. Prices of farm products, however, have declined greatly. Hence, the farm outlook for 1938 is very uncertain.

There are 15,000,000 farm families in the United States. They are a vital factor in the Nation's retail trade. Today they are up against a tremendous problem. It boils down to this: The farmer must receive, in proportion, for his wheat, potatoes, or apples what a manufacturer charges for his cloth, shoes, or tools. Since a year ago farm prices have dropped nearly 30 per cent. Meanwhile, prices for the goods which farmers must buy have dropped only 6 per cent. This means that the buying power of farm products is more than 20 per cent lower.



ROGER W. BABSON.

Prices Stabilizing.

The price decline is still going on although the momentum is easing up. Sharpest drops have come in the quotations on grains, fruits, vegetables, meats, butter, and cotton. Milk, eggs, and poultry have made a better showing. Farm wages have eased off slightly since last summer, but are as high as a year ago. Taxes, of course, are no lower. Hence, the profits of the American farmer have slumped badly in the last 12 months. Dairy farmers are the one exception. While their prices are lower than last summer, one major item in their production cost—feed—has fallen sharply.

Now the new farm season is under way. Acreages of some crops will be slightly under 1937 but wheat acreage will be close to a record. The Government forecast of the winter wheat crop places it well above 700,000,000 bushels. This would be the third largest in history. The average of the past five years is 485,000,000 bushels. Even the so-called drought areas, particularly the prairie provinces of Canada, should produce the first real harvest in years. Moreover, we are going into the new crop season with huge carry-overs. The cotton surplus, for instance, is the largest on record and almost equals an average annual crop.

A new agricultural act was okayed by Congress last winter. Under its provisions much of the various 1938 crops will not be allowed to go on the market. This means an outlay of millions of dollars by the Federal Government. In cotton alone the cost could run as high as $600,000,000. This program may temporarily help farmers. But it may became a tremendous burden on the rest of the country. Furthermore, a big backwash of rural sentiment is rising against Government control and its allotment plan. Farmers are talking of refusing "to sacrifice liberty for prosperity." They are rugged individualists and Secretary Wallace's new program may strike a snag in rural resistance to "regimentation."

Grasshopper Plague?

May farm forecasts, however, can easily turn into July boomerangs. This happened in '34 and '36 as June droughts withered the Great Plains. This year farmers are worried by the possibility of a grasshopper plague. Weather conditions have been ideal for these insects. Scientists and technical men are so fearful of this menace that they have already mapped out their plans to combat the 'hoppers, should they strike. Those who saw the moving picture, "The Good Earth," have a realizatoin of what a real grasshopper invasion means.

Drought, grasshoppers, or some other event could change present forecasts radically. Smaller crops sold at higher prices would probably bring more farm income than bumper harvests at low prices. Big crops will certainly help those businesses — railroads, elevators, etc.—which handle the crops. But regardless of the size of the 1938 harvest, there should be improvement in some prices between now and fall as general business picks up. I doubt, however, if such an improvement would bring farm income up to the 1937 level. So farm prospects for the next few months are questionable. In fact, country retail sales are only now beginning to reflect the sharp drop in rural income which we have already experienced this year.

Don't Pity the Farmer.

The longer-term picture has not changed in recent months. The real answer to the American farm problem is better farming methods, greater diversification of crops, the revival of world trade and the development of new industrial uses for farm products. Huge one-crop farms operated as big business aggravate the farm problem. Farming is a manner of living. It cannot be encouraged as a big business. Remember that the farmer enjoys many advantages that the city worker does not have. With world conditions as they are today, I feel that well-trained farmers who own small fertile units have the safest long-pull outlook of any class or group in America.

Steel Output Sags in Week To 31 Per Cent

Seasonal Factors Fail to Provide Increased Activity.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 8.—The magazine Steel today said the first week in May failed to bring about any indication of an upturn in the steel industry.

"Spring seasonal factors having failed to support the market a slightly downward movement is apparent in steel buying," the publication said in its weekly review of the industry.

It said that consumers are showing no tendency to buy fo the future and covering only current needs, but added that the impending Navy building program holds out promise for fair tonnages during the last half.

Private shipbuilding and the hope that Government aid may bring additional railroad purchases were listed as other factors indicating a possible midyear upturn.

The national operating rate tumbled 1 point last week to 31 per cent of capacity, with indications, the magazine said, "that this week may see a lower level of activity." Pittsburgh declined 1 point to 25 per cent, Chicago 1 point to 32.55, Wheeling 5 points to 41, and Cleveland 4 points to 28.

Operations increased at Youngstown up 1 point to 30, Cincinnati 10 points to 40, and New England 3 points to 30 per cent, while Eastern Pennsylvania, Buffalo, St. Louis, Birmingham and Detroit remained unchanged.

Pig iron production in April was the smallest monthly output since February this year, and the lowest for any April since 1933. Total April production was estimated at 1,598,008 gross tons compared with 1,470,211 tons in March. Output for the four months aggregated 5,609,414 tons compared with 13,110,853 tons for the same period of 1937, a decline of 57.2 per cent.

Lumber Shipments 59 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended April 30 stood at 49 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 59 per cent of average 1929 shipments. Production was about 48 per cent of the corresponding week of 1929; shipments, about 54 per cent of that week's shipments.

Reported shipments and new orders in the week ended April 30, gained over the preceding week; production was less. New business was 9 per cent above output, shipments 18 per cent above. All items in the week ended April 30, 1938, were appreciably lower than during the corresponding week of 1937.

Australian Loan One-Third Subscribed

London, May 8 (AP).—British investors responded half-heartedly today to the floating of an Australian loan of £7,000,000 ($35,000,000), the first Australian "new money" loan since 1929.

Underwriters had to take up about 66 per cent of the amount offered and dealings in the new issue on the stock exchange started with a 1-point discount, or 98 compared to the issue price of 99.

April Cotton Trading 3,129,900 Bales

The Commodity Exchange Administration reported yesterday that trading in cotton futures on the three organized exchange markets totaled 3,129,900 bales during April, compared with 3,472,200 in March.

A total of 2,618,300 bales or 83.6 per cent was traded on the New York Cotton Exchange, 500,400 bales or 16 per cent on the New Orleans Cotton Exchange; 11,200 bales or .4 per cent on the Chicago Board of Trade.

N. Y. Listed Bonds Advance in April

New York, May 8 (AP).—Bond issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange as of May 1 amounted to 1,373 with a par value of $48,279,224,071 and an aggregate market value of $42,398,688,128.

A month earlier the same number of issues were listed, with a par value of $48,360,358,911, market value of $41,450,248,311 and average price of $85.71.

Average Tobacco Prices.

New York, May 8 (AP).—Average price of United States type 12, grade B4F flue-cured tobacco for the week ended May 7 advanced to 23.2 cents a pound from 23 cents in the preceding week, H. A. Stich, tobacco economist, reported today. A year ago the average price was 19.7 cents.

Inertia Checks Upturn Devices

New York, May 8.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co says today:

"Despite the fact that seasonally corrected indexes of business activity have followed a sidewise movement for more than four months, the business situation has shown some evidence of further deterioration in recent weeks. While numerous industries have experienced some seasonal improvement this spring, there has certainly been no vigor in the improvement. Moreover, there is increasing evidence that operations in several major industries have already passed their spring peak.

"For example, steel activity has been sagging for about a month, following the brief and moderate upturn earlier in the year. Based on demand prospects from the major consuming outlets, no expansion in steel activity is likely over the next several months. In fact, a further slow decline in operations between now and midsummer would not be surprising. Production of automobiles likewise appears to have passed the peak for the spring season. The industry from now until the next model season will be concentrating on cleaning up stocks of this year's models, and production will probably be largely for fill-in purposes."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Partner's Suit Often Safest Lead.

The mere fact that partner's bid has been strongly over-called with no trump is no reason for failing to open his suit, especially when the lead of any other suit involves a sheer guess. In today's hand, West learned this lesscn at enormous cost.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠ A 7 5♡ 8 6◇ 7 5 3 2♣ A K 9 3 | |

| | ♠ Q 9♡ A Q 9◇ A K Q J 8♣ 10 7 4 | |

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♣ | 1 ♡ | 6 N T | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

A word as to South's extraordinary six notrump bid. South had as a partner a player much weaker than himself, both in the bidding and the play of the cards. The orthodox bid on South's part, over one heart, was to jump in diamonds, but this, he reasoned, would probably result in North's playing the hand at notrump and rather than let that happen he decided to "get there first." Perhaps it was just as well, since it is very doubtful that North could have managed the play as South proceeded to do.

West, feeling that a heart lead was pointless after South's terrific jump in notrumps, decided to make a "surprise attack," and selected the diamond ten. Declarer rattled off five diamond tricks, discarding one spade from dummy, while East let go three hearts and two spades. A club was then passed. East won with the queen and returned the heart jack. Declarer finessed, then led to the ace and king of clubs and, when the jack dropped, played dummy's fourth club. On this lead, East could no longer find a safe discard. As it happened, he chose to blank the heart king, and then declarer, after discarding his own spade, comfortably cashed the ace and nine of hearts. It would have been equally fatal for East to have discarded his spade jack, because then declarer would have discarded his own heart nine, cashed dummy's spade ace, dropping the king, then entered his hand with the heart ace to cash the promoted spade queen.

An original heart lead on West's part would have broken up this squeeze. Declarer's heart entries would have been removed before they could have become truly effective for a squeeze position. A spade lead, also, would have held declarer to five odd. But rather than guess about a side suit opening, West would have been better advised to have led his partner's bid-suit.

Mrs. Fairweather said: "Mothers in every land join us in our prayer that the world be spared another war."

Travis Bats in Five Runs as Nats Beat Browns, 9-7

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

18 WASHINGTON: MONDAY, MAY 9, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Charles Evard Street is downright amazed that his St. Louis Browns are still puttering around the cellar in the American League. Gabby Street, who has batted around the big leagues for 30 years, now confesses he's mildly baffled. He was saying so yesterday.

POVICH.

"If there was one thing I thought I had on this ball club, it was hitting power," he was saying. "I suspected we'd have trouble with our pitching, but now look at us. The pitching has been pretty good — pretty good — but we haven't been hitting a lick. It stumps me."

On paper, the Browns did figure to hit. There was Beau Bell, who was a .340 slugger last season, and Sammy West, who nudged the league's pitching for .328. Ethen Allen was a .316 hitter and at third base Harlond Clift wound up with a .306 average that embraced 29 home runs. Billy Sullivan, his catcher, was staying in the big league on account of his hitting, and Street had brought Red Kress along from Minneapolis to add more punch.

* * * *

"But look at us," said Street. "We've been wasting good pitching because we can't hit. Up in New York the other day, Clift made his first home run of the season—the only one so far. Bell can't strike his stride. In the 18 games we've played, he's gone hitless in 10. In our first 18 games, our two power men, Bell and Clift, have driven in exactly ten runs between them. How's that?"

We opined that wasn't very good, and in fact, it was very bad.

"But that isn't all," added Street. "We haven't been getting many breaks, either. Why, the other day in Boston, Bell hit one up against the scoreboard with the bases full and couldn't make a hit even on that ball. It bounced off the fence and Joe Vosmik caught it. Two of my men thought Vosmik caught the ball in the air and didn't run. It ended up in a double play."

This was supposed to be the Browns' big year in St. Louis. Off to a winning start when Buck Newsom beat the Cleveland Indians in the opener, the Browns found everything in their favor. The Cardinals traded off Dizzy Dean and with his passing, St. Louis fan interest switched to the American League in a great degree.

Not since 1922, when the Browns were nosed out by the Yankees for the American League pennant by a half game, had the American League been in the ascendancy in St. Louis. The surge of the Cardinals beginning in 1926 under Hornsby wrecked St. Louis as an American League city. But with Dean off the Cardinal roster, and the Browns seemingly headed for better things, Street visioned a sharp upturn in the Browns' battle for patronage.

* * * *

Big, blustery Newsom could step into Dean's shoes as the idol of St. Louis fandom if anybody could. And three straight victories that fell to his pitching arm did no harm, in that endeavor. Newsom has long had ambitions toward blossoming as an American League Dean and this loomed as his year. But in his last two starts he failed to go the route and his star is now dimmed.

Gabby Street is disappointed but he isn't discouraged. "It's early," he was saying. "There's too much power on this club. It will begin to show pretty soon. And my pitching is better than I anticipated. If that holds up, we'll stake make trouble—a lot of it—in this league."

He doesn't think the Yankees are a lead-pipe cinch. He was saying that Cleveland could win the pennant. Boston wasn't so hot, and the Tigers and White Sox aren't in the same class with the Yanks and Cleveland. He wouldn't be a bit surprised if the Indians stayed right there on top.

* * * *

Out of the Mail Bag:

"Dear Mr. Povich: I am writing about a Cleveland rookie, who, I am sure, you will hear from in the box scores within a very short while.

"During the last game of their recent series in Washington you will remember that the Indians came very close to tying the score in the ninth inning. Down in the Cleveland bull pen was a big right-hander warming up to enter the game if the score was tied. If he had gotten into the game it would have been the major-league debut of Johnny Humphries, pitching sensation of the New Orleans club last year.

"An invetsigation of the records will show you what a remarkable season this fellow had in his first year in organized baseball. His success, however, is overshadowed by the human-interest story to be found in his life.

"Born in Clifton Forge, Va., in 1915, his early life was not pleasant as is the lot of most of us. His father did not enjoy the best of health and John was forced out of school to help support his family. He returned a year later to become a popular sandlot pitcher with western Virginia fans, and after his graduation from school attended the University of North Carolina for two sessions.

"He jumped directly from there to the New Orleans club last year. Since he started earning a regular salary he has finished paying for his parents' home. Before many days he will get his chance and American League batters are going to do some futile swinging at blinding speed and the fastest curve in the business.

"When this happens, don't say you weren't warned. Sincerely, R. Powers, 131 Hume Ave., Alexandria, Va."

(Editor's note—Johnny Humphries made his major league debut yesterday. After Bob Feller was batted out of the box, Humphries pitched the last six innings and shut out the Red Sox with two hits.)

Joe Kuhel Forced From Game With Badly Wrenched Foot

Chisox First Baseman Injured on Try to Steal Second; Will Be Out Several Days.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—The injury jinx struck Jimmy Dykes' Chicago White Sox infield again today and put First Baseman Joe Kuhel on the hospital list with a badly wrenched foot.

First fears that the infielder, who came to the White Sox from the Senators in March in a trade for Zeke Bonura, might have a fractured right instep were dispelled when X-rays at St. Elizabeth Hospital revealed no bones were broken.

Kuhel, however, will be out of action for several days.

He was hurt in the fifth inning of today's game with the Yankees when his spikes caught in the bag as he tried to steal second. Teammates had to carry him to the dressing room, where a preliminary examination led to the belief the instep might be fractured.

Joe was taken to the hospital and an X-ray examination was performed immediately. Afterward, Dr. Robert Emmett Walsh said the 31-year-old first-sacker, now in his ninth year in the major leagues, had a "badly wrenched foot."

It was the second time this spring the "jinx" had landed on Dykes' infield. During spring training, his crack clouter and shortstop, Luke Appling, broke his leg and is still sidelined.

Kuhel will be 32-years-old next month. A left-handed batsman, he broke into organized baseball back in 1924 with Flint in the old Michigan-Ontario league. After seasoning at Springfield (Three-Eye league,) Lincoln (Western league) and Kansas City (American Association,) he was purchased by Washington, and had been with the Nats from 1931 until his trade to Chicago.

His best years in the big leagues were 1933, when he hit .322, and 1936, with .321. His eight-year lifetime average is .291.

20,835 See Hubbell, Ott BeatCubs,4-2

Mel Hits Two Home Runs as King Carl Holds Foes at Bay.

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—New York's league leading Giants combined the wizardry of Pitcher Carl Hubbell and two home runs by Mel Ott to defeat Chicago's challenging cubs, 4 to 2, today in their first meeting of the 1938 National League season.

A crowd of 20,835 ignored cold and threatening weather to watch Hubbell fan seven cubs and scatter nine hits well enough to achieve his fourth straight win of the season.

Ott gave him a 2 to 0 working lead in the first inning when he clubbed Larry French' initial pitch to him for a home run after Jim Ripple had walked. In the sixth Ripple was on base as a result of a single when Ott hit another homer—his fourth of the year and the 22d by the Giants this season.

Giants Checked.

Other than Ott's outbursts, the Giants were held well in hand by Larry French and Jack Russell, who hurled the last two innings after French had been removed for a pinch hitter. French permitted five hits and Russell one.

Meanwhile, the Cubs placed plenty of men on base, but Hubbell was the master in all instances except the sixth inning. As a result nine Chicagoans were left stranded and the Cubs trailed three and a half games behind their Eastern rivals in the flag chase.

Frank Demaree started the Cubs' only scoring inning by singling after Phil Cavarretta, filling in for Rip Collins who was out with a bad cold, had fanned. Joe Marty flied out and then Augie Galan drew a base on balls. Gabby Hartnett slammed a double against the left field wall to score both runners.

Galan Has Big Day.

Galan had a big day against King Carl, getting three singles in as many official times at bat. Demaree also put together two singles, but other than the sixth the Cubs couldn't put them together when hits meant runs, although they inaugurated a mild threat in the eighth.

Ripple was the only Giant other than Ott to collect two hits. Both were singles.

Leonard Is Nats' Choice to Beat Browns Today

Emil Leonard, author of the Nats' only two shutout victories of the season, today will attempt to extend the Nats' winning streak to six straight when he takes the mound against the Browns.

Leonard has allowed only one earned run in his last 19 innings of pitching. He will be making his first appearance since his 13-inning, 1-0 defeat of Bob Feller last week.

Manager Gabby Street, of the Browns, is expected to send Oral Hildebrand to the mound. Hildebrand lost a 3-2 game to the Yankees in his last start. Vito Tamulis is Street's alternate choice.

Buck Newsom is expected to make his appearance in the series tomorrow in the final game.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Outstanding among the Nats who contributed to yesterday's 9-7 defeat of the Browns was the young gentleman from Georgia, Cecil Travis.

To Travis, five points, because he produced a hit in three of his four appearances at the plate, because he hit a home run with two on base and because he single-handedly drove in five of the Washington runs.

To George Case, two points, because he reached base four times, thrice with clean hits, because he beat out a perfect bunt, and because he scored four of the Nats' runs.

To Zeke Bonura, one point, because his three singles drove in two runs and figured in two others.

To Pete Appleton, one point because he permitted no batter to reach base after relieving Wes Ferrell with one out in the eighth at a time when the Nats' lead was threatened.

To Mel Almada, one point because his catch of Beau Bell's long fly against the center field fence in the second inning was a daring piece of work and one of the finest fielding plays of the season.

Feller Routed as Bosox Blank Indians, 5 to 0

Wilson Allows Leaders 4 Hits; Rookie Humphries Stops Boston, Giving Two Blows After Third.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 8.—Jack Wilson, the Boston Red Sox's big righthander, shut out the league-leading Cleveland Indians, 5 to 0, with four hits in the series opener today to give Boston its third straight victory.

A crowd of 33,100 turned out to see Bob Feller, the Indians' pitching star, try for his fourth straight triumph, but the former schoolboy didn't have his stuff. After yielding four runs in the first three innings, Feller was removed for a pinch hitter. John Humphries, a rookie, up from New Orleans, making his major league debut, let Boston down with two hits and one run the rest of the way, Feller being charged with the defeat.

Wilson was in rare form as he chalked up 12 strikeouts and won his first game. He repeatedly forced the Cleveland batters to pop up to the Boston fielders and was so effective that it wasn't until the ninth inning, when Higgins tossed out Keltner at first, that Boston registered its only assist of the game.

Hal Trosky proved to be Wilson's lone headache, registering a double and single in four times up. Ken Keltner and Bruce Campbell made the other Cleveland hits.

Manager Joe Cronin, who became a father yesterday, celebrated his return to the Sox line-up after a two-day absence by clouting a homer and a double in four times up, while Jimmy Foxx's triple drove in two runs in the first inning, lifting his runs batted in total to 29 for the season.

Hemsley was stunned by a bouncing ball in the first inning, but resumed playing.

Yank Homers Beat Chisox; Ruffing Wins

New York, May 8 (AP).—The Yankees fired three home runs at the Chicago White Sox today and came through with a 7-to-3 victory. The Sox lost not only the ball game, but also their first baseman, Joe Kuhel, who suffered a possible broken right instep and may be out a month.

Lou Gehrig belted his second homer of the season with a mate aboard in the fourth frame, and Tommy Henrich and Joe DiMaggio each clouted one with the bags empty in the sixth to drive Bill Dietrich to the showers and put the game on ice.

Although Red Ruffing gave up ten hits, compared to eight the Yankees collected, he canned nine and was on top in the pinches throughout as he scored his fourth win of the year.

The victory stretched the Yanks' winning streak to six straight.

Reward Offered For Recovery of Buddy Lewis' Bat

The person or persons who made off with a broken bat discarded at Griffith Stadium by Buddy Lewis a week ago will receive a shiny new model if the fractured bat is returned to the Washington park.

That was the announcement authorized by Clark Griffith yesterday.

Since losing his broken bat, the Nats' third baseman has discovered that it was the last bat in his stock and the factory is unable to supply the same model unless the broken bat is returned.

Lewis, who was on a wild hitting spree until forced to use another type of bat, has dropped nearly 50 points from his average within a week.

Late Rally Is Checked By Appleton

Nats' Shortstop Cracks Homer in Seventh to Score 3 Runs.

By Shirley Povich.

The winning streak of the Nats collided with the losing streak of the Browns at Griffith Stadium yesterday and neither was damaged. In fact, the two streaks thrived. Washington emerged with its fifth straight victory and St. Louis with its sixth straight defeat. The victory put the Nats a half game out of first place, in a tie with New York.

The score was 9 to 7. Wes Ferrell will be grateful to hear. Ferrell was somewhere under the showers before the finish, wondering if the Browns had wiped out completely the 8-2 lead the Nats were enjoying as late as the eighth inning. In that inning the St. Louis club had showered the premises with base hits, nudged five runs across the plate and driven Mr. Ferrell from the box.

Ferrell's fadeout was popular with a great portion of the 16,000 customers who didn't like the way he was pitching, even if the Browns did. As early as the fourth inning the citizens began to boo Ferrell, and when he threatened to pitch away that six-run lead in the eighth they were very much displeased with him and said so emphatically. They said "Boo!" in a very loud and impatient tone.

West Hits Homer.

The blow that displeased the fans was Sammy West's home run with two on base in the eighth, which cut the Nats' lead to 8-7. But it had its compensations for the customers. Because that was the last of Ferrell and in came Pete Appleton, who pacified the Browns from that point to the finish.

There was a fellow named Cecil Travis who was a great help to the Nats yesterday. Travis was knocking in Washington runs faster than Ferrell was pitching in St. Louis tallies. He drove over a run in the third inning with a single, and knocked over another with a single in the fifth. But he was only warming up for his seventh-inning effort, it seems. Because in that inning he swatted a home run into centerfield and scored behind two of his colleagues to bring his run-producing total to five for the day.

George Case was no drawback to the Nats, either. He produced three hits in his first three times at bat against left-handed Russ Van Atta, reached base four times and scored four runs.

Browns Err Thrice.

The Nats, incidentally, received plenty of encouragement from the Browns' defense. The St. Louis lads were guilty of three errors and each misplay figured in a Washington run.

The Nats instituted proceedings against Van Atta in the first inning when Mel Almada, George Case and Zeke Bonura whacked out singles which, combined with a muff by Mills in leftfield, established Washington in a 2-0 lead. Van Atta's single to right with two out and Mills' looping triple to short right brought the Brownies a run in the third, but the Nats got that one back in the same inning. Case beat out a bunt, and Bonura and Travis singled him home.

The Browns came up with a run in the fourth to make it 3-2 when Bell and West doubled, but Travis engineered a double play that averted further damage and the Nats presented Ferrell with another run in the fifth. Case bounced a hit off Van Atta's glove, swiped second and, ultimately, Travis brought him home with a single to center.

It looked like a breeze for the Nats in the seventh. Lewis beat out a drag bunt along the first base line and then Case's dismal attempt at a sacrifice bunt blew the inning wide open. Van Atta grabbed the ball and on the presumption that one of his infielders was covering second, threw to that base. Nobody was

Cards Beat Dodgers, 4-2

Mize Accounts for All of St. Louis' Runs.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 8.—Slamming out two home runs and a double, Johnny Mize slugged the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-to-2 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers in their first series opener today.

The big Cardinal first baseman batted in three runs and scored thrice himself to almost singlehandedly give Lon Warneke his third victory of the season. Waite Hoyt was the losing pitcher.

Warneke was injured rather painfully in the sixth when a ball off Harry Lavagetto's bat hit him on the hip. He was carried off the field, but recovered in time to return to the mound in the seventh.

Hexameter Washington Show Victor

Championship in Hunter Class Is Won by Untermyer Entry.

By Gene Reed.

The final day of the successful Washington Horse Show resulted in several new champions and reserve champions being crowned in the pouring rain, the recipients of these honors being, in every case but one, horses that are comparative novices in big-time competition.

Hexameter, the only exception to this rule, was clearly slated for one of the tricolors from the beginning. It was no surprise when he took the lightweight championship with his record of five blues and any number of lesser ribbons. Reserve went to Demopolis, a bay horse belonging to Morris S. Clarke, of Orange, Va., a nice-looking bay with an inconspicuous way of winning lots of good places.

Hexameter then went on to champion hunter, any weight, of the show.

The middle and heavyweight division of the hunter finals went to Boby E., a horse being shown here for the first time and certain to go on to what may be called "ensuing triumphs." This horse is also from Orange, Va., and was ridden by Moe Clarke, who also had the honor of showing and owning Demopolis.

Mrs. Cary Jackson, agent for Nydrie Farms, captured the reserve of this division with Smoulder, a grand big chestnut.

Most thrilling open jumping class of the show was practically the last event offered, the triple bar class, fought out in a downpour with the crowd huddled under the grandstand cheering for their respective favorites. Final winner was Randles Way, with two members of the military, Lieut. Johnny Pugh and Capt. Johnny Hines fighting out to the point where it was decided to toss up, Lieut. Pugh winning the toss for his spectacularly fast jumper, Sir Conrad.

Phils Blank Reds by 2-0

Bucky Walters Wins Pitching Duel.

Cincinnati, May 8 (AP).—The Phillies put over two runs in the eighth inning here today to blank the Cincinnati Reds, 2-0.

In a battle between Bucky Walters and Rookie Johnny Vander Meer, the game was scoreless for seven innings. The Phillies scored on two walks and two singles, Mueller scoring on Martin's long fly and Klein coming in on Scharein's bounder.

The Reds muffed several chances to score, but failed to hit in the clutches and left 11 men standing on bases.

Vander Meer got into tough spots by walking seven Phillies, but made up for his wildness by fanning six men.

Haight Calls Preakness "Open Race"; Dauber May Be Favorite

'Outsiders' Given Chance at Pimlico

Sun Egret and Other 'Outsiders' May Run Off With the Race; Five Derby Horses Are on Their Way for Maryland Classic.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Bound, May 8.—With the sixty-fourth Kentucky Derby history, the turf world turned eyes toward Pimlico, where on Saturday the older, but less frequently contested Preakness has its forty-eighth renewal on the outskirts of Baltimore. For the first time in years, the Derby winner will not go postward in the Maryland classic.

Herbert M. Woolf, Kansas City department store head and owner of Lawrin, was kicking himself last night for not naming the well-built, but bad-legged son of Insco for the Preakness. At the time the nominations closed for the Maryland race, last July 15, Lawrin had not shown signs of greatness that would have made him an entry.

It was only after his brilliant victories on the Hialeah and Flamingo Stakes in Florida last winter that his name was put in the Derby line-up. On April 15, by payment of $1,500, Lawrin could have been made a supplementary entry, along with Myron Selznick's Can't Wait, who ran third yesterday, and A. C. Compton's Sun Egret. Unfortunately, Ben Jones, his trainer, was trying to correct a slightly split hoof and his Preakness chance was allowed to pass by the boards.

HAIGHT.

On this train, transporting to the Preakness scene upwards of a hundred owners, trainers, jockeys and turfwriters, opinion is divided on two subjects. Some contend that the absence of Lawrin will not seriously affect the Preakness. Others say that the punch is out now that the Derby winner is absent.

Camp Is Divided.

The camp of experts also is divided on whether or not certain horses had trouble in the running of the Derby. No two persons see eye-to-eye in a horse race. There are those who contend that the Foxcatcher Farm's Dauber has plenty of excuse, and many are of the definite opinion that he was the best horse in the race, regardless of the result. Persons who bet Dauber and watched only the one horse say that Jockey Maurice Peters was forced to pull up twice along the backstretch when the big son of Pennant was trying to improve his position. This probably took something out of him because Dauber did not show that stretch rush he put on either behind Stagehand in the Santa Anita Derby or at Havre de Grace last month. He closed ground gradually on Lawrin, making up several lengths but he was not running over horses.

The Chief Is Scared.

With The Chief being paraded quietly to the paddock, one of the infield bands suddenly struck up and the colt turned wild horse. The stableman leading him, barely held on while the colt went through a series of gymnastics. The Chief failed to become quiet in the paddock and was led to the post by the outrider—a sweating and badly scared horse.

Either before or during the race, The Chief suffered a leg cut to be the only horse injured in the Derby. While not serious, Sande is undecided about his future and will wait until midweek before making a decision on shipping him to the Preakness.

The five horses that began the trek to Pimlico were Dauber, Can't Wait, Fighting Fox, Bull Lea and Menow. A scattering of Derby watchers have excuses for Can't Wait, Fighting Fox and Menow, but none for Bull Lea. The heft Kentucky horse colt, like the late Calvin Coolidge, just "did not choose to run," for some unexplainable reason. His handlers know that yesterday's performance was "not his race" and they hope he will snap out of it in Maryland.

Bull Lea Entered.

The entry of Bull Lea in the Preakness caused a raising of eyebrows in turf circles. It will mark the first time that Warren Wright's Calumet Farm has run a horse at Pimlico since 1936 when Privilege was disqualified after Harry Richards and Eddie Arcaro had staged a horseback fist fight down the stretch. The purse was given to Walter M. Jefford's Matey and Arcaro, who rode Lawrin yesterday, was suspended.

Fighting Fox comes in for a lot of ribbing for the selling-plater manner in which he quit. But the Wood Memorial winner has retained some of his backers. They contend that the Bel Air colt was bumped, not badly, but repeatedly going to the first turn. He was the inside of Mountain Ridge and Menow. The former was seen to swerve but just how much he interferred with the Fox is not known.

Can't Wait was the surprise of the race. He improved immensely but some contend that his fine move near the far turn was made too abruptly. That he is game cannot be questioned. He came again after dropping back entering the stretch.

Menow Needs Short Route.

The Menow alibiers say that he will be at better advantage in the Preakness, a shorter race. They are not satisfied that Menow had a fair shot at the Derby because he was forced to run on the outside of horses going to the first turn.

But the Preakness, despite Dauber, is not confined to horses which performed in the Derby, not by a long shot. Sun Egret, rested from its long campaign and his victories against older horses, will be there with capital letters, particularly if the track is off. Bourbon King may start as a running mate for Menow. Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Nedayr, despite his New York defeat, is slated to run and always has favored the Pimlico track. J. W. Y. Martin is likely to send out Battle Jack, hoping he will show some of that great early Havre de Grace form. The Wheatley Stable boasts an almost sure starter in Stormscud, while Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, wanting to see his colors in action, may shoot with Tedium. Bull Whip, slightly hurt in his only start of the year, has been working well and may represent the Brandywine Stable.

Dauber seems headed for favoritism, probably at 8 to 5, in the Preakness, but the Maryland classic at this writing deserves the status of an "open" race.

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

Well, we go into the last week of the major Maryland season and it promises to be a honey. Pimlico officials made a smart move when they shifted the $20,000 added Dixie Handicap to Wednesday from Saturday before the Preakness. That gives the track two of the country's most historic races in four days. The Dixie promises to be a keenly fought race although there is no chance that it will steal the limelight from the Preakness. It will bring together for the first time this year John Manfuso's Aneroid and the Shandon Farm's Burning Star. Both appear to be in their best form. About eight other top-flight stake horses are due to march postward. The Dixie and the Preakness are not the only stakes up for competition. There's the $2,000 added Jennings Handicap today, the $2,500 added Survivor tomorrow, the $2,500 Carroll Handicap on Thursday and that grand clash of juveniles, the Pimlico Nursery, on Friday. Next week, it will be "on to Charles Town" and after all the excitement, I believe I'm going to like the homey West Virginia course. BILL.

First race—Frank Brooke has been threatening and now appears to have been dropped in a spot where he can win. Hastings View won at Havre De Grace at good odds. Appears the main threat. Brilliant Blue ran well in cheaper company in last start.

Second race—Orchids Next gets the call in this event. Needs only good handling. Walli has been knocking at the door and might prove troublesome. Bob Junior showed some good efforts in Florida.

Third race—Gaona barely missed the other day when she was defeated by Macie Margaret. Is well placed and should click this time. Critt has one good effort to his credit. Lost a nose decision to Suneen at the Graw. Happy Marlene may upset the dope.

Fourth race—Shalako was in plenty of trouble in his last outing. Should he get clear sailing going to the first turn, looks good enough to trim this kind. Kai Sou needs only to run back to that last winning effort in order to prove dangerous. Virginia Boy's graduation effort at Havre de Grace gives him next call.

Fifth race—Preeminent, always partial to this track, turned in a sensational effort when he defeated some good ones in Friday's feature race. Is again in what appears to be a good spot. Sun Egret is coupled with King Pharamond and Gerald as the Parr-Compton entry, and will be mighty dangerous. Black Look, outsider in the field, might take it all.

Sixth race—Saidona was never better. Won last with greatest ease. Looks like the day's best bet. Black Scout was scratched for this and has a long-shot chance. Bounding Count for the short end.

Seventh race—Cornwallis was pitted too high in his last effort. Has been dropped in what appears to be a soft spot. Jobakheta likes this course and could provide a surprise if up to a top effort. Balapin for what's left.

Best bet—Saidona.

Derby Correction.

It was erroneously reported in Sunday's story by Walter Haight on the Kentucky Derby that Lawrin's time of 2:04 4-5 in Saturday's running of the Blue Grass classic was the slowest since Donerail's performance in the event in 1913.

The record book shows that there were many races slower than Lawrin's and, in justice to the horse and its owner and to correct the error, we repeat them as follows: 1915, Regret, 2:05 2-5; 1918, Exterminator, 2:10 4-5; 1919, Sir Barton, 2:09 4-5; 1920, Paul Jones, 2:09; 1923, Zev, 2:05 2-3; 1924, Black Gold, 2:05 1-5; 1925, Flying Ebony, 2:07 3-5; 1927, Whiskery, 2:06; 1928, Reigh Count, 2:10 3-5; 1929, Clyde Van Dusen, 2:10 4-5; 1930, Gallant Fox, 2:07 3-5; 1932, Burgoo King, 2:05 1-5; 1933, Broker's Tip, 2:06 1-5, and 1935, Omaha, 2:05.

3 Inter-High Games Head Week's Card

Results of Contests May Change One-Sided Series.

By Perry Wilkinson.

Even though Eastern has won three straight games and seems to be headed toward successful defense of its interhigh series crown, three title games this week will be watched with unusual interest because the outcomes could change the complexion of the race overnight.

Central, a better ball club than it seemed in its two previous engagements, tackles Anacostia tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. at Central Stadium. This game, which brings together two teams that are tied for the cellar position, will not affect the league leaders, but Central has the type of team that is likely to bump Eastern when the two face each other. And if this happens, several of the teams will have a chance for top honors.

The fourth double-header of the season is on tap Friday, and the results are likely to have a direct bearing on the loop leaders. Tech, a hard-hitting club and another team that has a good chance of downing Coach Guyon's lads, will play Roosevelt in the latter's stadium at 3:30 p. m. At the same time, Western's Red Raiders, which are ready to jump into a tie for first place when the Lincoln Parkers are upset, meet Wilson at Western Stadium.

It is too early in the season to figure the Easterners in, and if the top clubs hit their stride, as most of the coaches believe they will, an interesting race is in store for scholastic baseball fans. In addition to the 3 interhigh games, 14 other baseball tilts are scheduled this week with the Bethesda-Georgetown Prep battle today heading the list.

Rose Nine Beats Sanitary To Gain Tie for Top Place

Behind the 3-hit pitching of Mike Hickman, Rose Liquor's nine walloped the Sanitary Grocery team, 27 to 0, in a National City League A game yesterday on the No. 9 West Potomac diamond. The second straight win sent the Rose crew into a first-place tie with Police Boys' Club No. 4 in League A.

Klein's Tavern and Fairfax Farms Dairy battled to a 6-6 tie before several thousand spectators on the South Ellipse field. This game will be replayed if it has a bearing on first place at the close of the first-half series.

Police Boys Club No. 4 scored an upset by downing the more experienced Union Printers nine, 12-7. The game was called in the eighth inning, due to rain.

Market Pharmacy spanked Atlantic & Pacific, M. B. A., 7-1, to round out the League A program for the day.

In League B competition, Noland Supply, behind the heavy hitting of Mosser, won over Pirates, 8-3. Brown, of the losers, got three hits to lead the Pirate attack. The Capital Transit team defeated Tucci Plumbers, 12-6, on No. 11 West Potomac field. Anacostia Motors trounced the Girardian crew, 10-4, while Russell Motors and Read's Pharmacy were battling to a 6-all draw in a nine-inning game played on the McGruder Park field.

Bob Burns Says—

I would be the last one in the world to say there ain't no such thing as gettin' a break in business but I do think the main thing is to pick out the line of work you're cut out for.

I have an uncle down home who's a pretty successful blacksmith and he was tellin' me the other day what a lucky thing it was for him that he chose blacksmithin' as a profession. He said, "At first I kinda wanted to be a dentist, but if I had followed that, I would probably have starved to death."

I says, "What makes you think so?" And he says, "Well, I've been runnin' this blacksmith shop for 10 years and in all that time, no one ever come in and asked me to pull a tooth."

Home Shortage Worst in South, Survey Reveals

St. Louis and Atlanta Are Found Most Crowded Large Cities.

Housing congestion is most acute in the Southern States, according to a report based on the National Health Survey of 1935-36, made public yesterday by the United States Public Health Service.

In the South, 25 per cent of the families surveyed were in dwellings with more than one person per room, compared with 10 per cent in the West, 15 per cent in the East and 15 per cent in the Central States.

So marked were variations in the housing problems of 83 cities studied that it was found impossible to describe the national situation adequately by striking averages for the whole urban area. In one city, for instance, 40 per cent of the households canvassed had more than one person per room, while in another city less than 3 per cent fell in that category.

Covering 703,000 households, the Public Health Service found that 16 per cent were dwellings sheltering more than one person per room; 6 per cent with more than one and one-half persons per room and 4 per cent with two or more persons.

Persons in families with annual incomes of less than $1,000 represented 40 per cent of the surveyed group.

Among cities with population in excess of 500,000, St. Louis showed the largest percentage of families living in crowded homes. In the 100,000 to 500,000 class, Atlanta was first, and Montgomery, Ala., led in the 25,000 to 100,000 bracket. Among cities with population under 25,000, Gadsden, Ala., had the highest percentage.

Girl Suicide in N.Y. Is Believed Indian From Oklahoma

New York, May 8 (AP).—Police today tentatively identified "The Little Girl in Grey"—the pretty young brunette who died after swallowing poison in the Midtown Bus Terminal on Friday—as Patricia Walker, 22, half-Indian, native of Okmulgee, Okla.

Fingerprints of the girl, who left an 8-page note telling of her downfall after running away from home at the age of 14, corresponded with those of the Walker girl, who recently served 20 days in Columbia, S. C., for carrying concealed weapons.

The fingerprint classification and description of the Walker girl were wired to New York by the South Carolina State Highway Patrol at Columbia. They described Patricia Walker as 22 years old, 5 feet 3 inches tall, weight 90 pounds, with brown hair and brown eyes.

State Official to Talk.

Solomon Levitan, Wisconsin State treasurer, will speak on "The Jew in Politics" at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Jewish Community Center. Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, will be chairman of the meeting.

Civic Groups Join Renovizing Drive

Owners of homes and business properties have been invited by the Washington Building Congress and 14 other business and civic organizations to join in the "Renovize Washington" campaign. The committee has planned demonstration projects in several sections of the city to interest the public in repairing and remodeling run-down buildings.

Any owner, with assistance of cooperating members of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, may secure a loan from a local bank. The renovizing committee then will assist him in asking qualified contractors for bids. At completion of the project, the public will be invited to inspect the remodeled building.

The committee prefers buildings located in communities where values are high enough to justify additional investment.

Fraga to Compare Laws of Americas

Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, Ambassador from Cuba, will speak at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday at a luncheon for members of the section of international and comparative law of the American Bar Association.

Dr. Fraga will present "A Comparative Study of the Constitution of the United States of Constitutions of Pan-American Countries." He will be introduced by John P. Lullington, of Houston, Tex., chairman of the section of international and comparative law.

Paul Walker to Speak.

Paul A. Walker, Federal Communications commissioner, will speak at a banquet of Phi Delta Legal Fraternity of George Washington University, in the Wardman Park Hotel tonight at 7 o'clock.

Blasser Will Speak To S. A. R. on Marxism

George A. Blasser, associate editor of the magazine National Republic, will speak on communism in the United States at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday in the Willard Hotel. The meeting is sponsored by the Sons of the Revolution.
